U. S. Convicts Ally of Long On Tax, Sends Him to Prison

Government Is Victor in First Case Against Huey's Henchmen.

Marshals Escort Politician to Cell

State Rep. Fisher Fails to Serve Notice of Filing Appeal.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, April 26.—State Representative Joseph Fisher, the first of Huey P. Long's Louisiana political lieutenants to be tried on indictments charging income tax law violations, was convicted on two of seven counts by a Federal jury late today.

Judge Wayne G. Borah sentenced the swarthy little Jefferson Parish political leader to 18 months' imprisonment in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, in addition to paying the costs of the prosecution.

The verdict was nearly 16 hours after the case was given to the jury early today and after the jurors had called upon the court to re-read the voluminous charge, which procedure alone required nearly two hours.

200 Witnesses Heard.

One of the counts on which Fisher was found guilty was a felony and carried a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment, $10,000 fine and costs of the prosecution. On this count Judge Borah imposed an 18-month sentence and levied the prosecution costs against the defendant.

The other was a misdemeanor count, carried a maximum of a year in jail and $10,000 fine. Fisher was sentenced to 12 months on this count, but the two prison sentences were imposed so as to run concurrently.

Prosecuting officials declined to estimate the costs of the prosecution, which required nearly a month's time during which nearly 200 witnesses testified and hundreds of documents were placed into the record.

Silent on Appeal.

The misdemeanor count charged willful failure to file an income tax return for 1932.

Fisher was acquitted on four felony counts charging wilful attempts to evade and defeat income tax payments for 1929, 1930, 1931 and 1932. He also was acquitted on a misdemeanor count charging willful failure to file a return for 1931.

Fisher received the verdict with no show of emotion.

He was taken to the Federal jail here pending filing of application for bail, which was not immediately done.

Fisher's counsel refused to state whether he would file a motion for a new trial, which if denied, would automatically be followed by an appeal.

Having obtained a conviction in its first case against nine Louisianians under indictment for alleged income tax law violations, among whom are several persons high in Senator Long's State organization,

The Solution

To the Radio Thriller, 'What Would You Do?'

The solution of the eighth thrilling "What Would You Do?" real life dramas broadcast Friday at 5:30 p. m. from WJEJ, Hagerstown, Md., follows:

The night was black. Every shell-burst that hit the canopy of heaven lighted the sector for miles around as bright as sunlight. And during these brief periods of "daylight," snipers set their guns anew on any unfamiliar object revealed through the powerful lens of the binocular.

The messenger grabbed a wire-post and pulled himself along the ground to another shell-hole just as one of those flares hit the sky. "This is risky business!" he thought. A sniper's bullet whizzed through the air as if meant for the messenger. Maybe it was. The air was thick with death-lead, and none of the shells had any tag on it.

Soon it was black again, the messenger crawled out of the hole and struggled through a barbed-wire entanglement. Suddenly the air was rent with machine-gun fire. The messenger dropped to his knees. "Oh, merciful God," he pleaded, "if you can make her happy, please do it for—me." The messenger toppled.

It was days before the messenger's body was discovered. Sergt. Atkinson ripped open the officer's coat on the body and took out the identification tag. It read: "Capt. Albert Wellborn, Co. G, 110th Infantry, 5th Division."

Engaged to Wed Son of General

ADELAIDE MOFFETT.

Adelaide Moffett Engagement To Son of General Is Revealed

Betrothal of 18-Year-Old Daughter of Millionaire Housing Administrator to Henry Gibbins, jr., Announced at Mayflower Party.

Adelaide Moffett, 18-year-old daughter of millionaire James A. Moffett, Federal housing administrator, who has a penchant for singing in night clubs and a yearning to be a radio star, is to be married.

Her engagement to Henry Gibbins, jr., 21, son of Brig. Gen. Henry Gibbins, assistant quartermaster general of the Army, now employed in Civilian Conservation Corps headquarters here, was announced last night at a party given by Mr. and Mrs. Moffett at the Mayflower Hotel.

It was Adelaide, who last fall under the name of Diana Dorrance competed in a radio audition contest to select a girl to play opposite Dick Powell in a radio program series to be known as "Hollywood Hotel." It was recalled that in the winter of 1934 Miss Moffett landed a job in a Florida rendezvous as a night club hostess. Her father put a stop to this.

In the radio audition which was held here, Miss Moffett sang "I Only Have Eyes for You." About this effort she said, "People began to think I was just another society girl on a lark, that a lot of influence was being used to get me on the air, and all that sort of thing. But it's not so. I'm serious about radio."

To Marry in September.

It was learned the romance, which was announced at a dinner intended to be a farewell party for Moffett, who is leaving his Federal post, began here in Washington. Adelaide, who made her debut in New York, came to Washington when her father accepted his Federal post. Young Gibbins was employed here.

The young couple plan to be married in September. It was learned that Gibbins plans to resign his job next week to accept an offer in business.

Miss Moffett is a graduate of the fashionable Todhunter School in New York. She also studied at the Fermata School at Aiken, S. C.

The prospective bridegroom went to high school in Honolulu where his father was stationed. In 1932 he was at Central High School here, where he was an all-high tackle. From Central he went to Roxbury School in Connecticut.

Paris, Moscow Likely to Seal Accord Today

Mutual Military Aid Is Provided in 2-Power Agreement.

The Situation Abroad.

Agreement was reported reached on the terms of the Franco-Soviet mutual military aid pact. Both countries were expected to sign it today.

France has ordered her air force to force down all German planes that cross her borders.

In London, two leading papers reported that Germany has scrapped another section of the Versailles Treaty by ordering the construction of a fleet of small submarines.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 26.—France and Russia today smoothed out the last rough spots in their proposed mutual military assistance pact, and tonight it was confidently expected the agreement would be initialed tomorrow morning.

A 75-minute conference between Minister Pierre Laval of France, and Ambassador Vladimir Potemkin of Russia, at the Quay D'Orsay sufficed to reconcile conflicting views as to the text of the treaty.

Afterward Potemkin, announcing an agreement had been reached, said the convention would be put into final form tonight and he would return to the Quay D'Orsay in the morning "with the experts."

This was generally taken to mean the pact would be initialed tomorrow.

Plan to Curb NRA Powers Given Senate

Case Against Colt Firm Called Insufficient by Richberg.

Clipping the Blue Eagle's pinions, amendments sharply restricting the scope and code functions of NRA were introduced in the Senate yesterday, while White House advice was sought on an alternate plan to extend temporarily the present NIRA act.

Two courses were proposed in the Senate Finance Committee as it met to determine the Blue Eagle's fate:

1. Whether the present act should be extended without change, thus giving the United States Supreme Court an opportunity to rule on an operating law, and not a moot case. Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Finance Committee, will take this up with the President.

2. Whether modifying amendments introduced yesterday by Senator Harrison, and reputedly worked out with Donald Richberg, chairman of the NIRA board, shall be called up for action instead.

The recovery act received another jolt meanwhile at hearings before the Senate Munitions Committee on the National Labor Relations Board's tangled case of code violation against the Colt Firearms Co., sole machine-gun manufacturers for the United States Army.

Army Defiant.

Chairman Richberg indicated that the Colt Co.'s Blue Eagle may be restored. Both his NIRA board and the Department of Justice doubt there is a sufficiently strong case of violation of Section 7(a), collective bargaining clause, against the company to stand up in court.

Testimony was presented that although the Navy Department was notified by NRA that the company's eagle had been removed, such notice never was given the War Department. A War Department official told the committee the Army could continue purchases from a company which had lost its eagle, "if the supply is essential to national defense."

Amendments to the Administration's NRA bill introduced yesterday by Senator Harrison would strengthen enforcement of the anti-trust laws, and debar price-fixing, except in natural resource industries, such as coal, oil, etc.

Would Outlaw Monopolies.

The term "code authority" would be stripped of any significance "indicating the possession of governmental power or authority," although the President could "encourage the establishment and continuation of trade or industry committees composed in whole or in part of members or representatives of one or more trades or industries."

The Federal Trade Commission would have power to issue "cease and desist" orders wherever it found "destructive, oppressive or discriminatory price cutting."

Power for the President to approve codes with price fixing and production control provisions, where needed to protect small industries, to meet excess production emergencies, or in Government regulated industries, would be eliminated.

Another amendment would outlaw monopolies and prohibit code provisions "promoting or sanctioning agreements or concerted action for the private fixing of prices or

Hopkins to Direct New Agency To Supervise Works Program

The President's 'Big Three' in Relief Set-up

Joins Walker and Ickes to Form 'Big 3' of Relief Setup.

He Will Control Progress Division

Plans Complete, Start of Vast Project Is Speeded.

By Felix Bruner.

Three men will direct the vast operations of the $4,880,000,000 work relief program, President Roosevelt revealed yesterday, as he issued the last installment of the serial story of his plan.

The latest addition to the triumvirate is Harry L. Hopkins, emergency relief administrator, who was named head of the progress division. The other two, formerly named, are Frank C. Walker, head of the division of applications and information, and Secretary Ickes, chairman of the allotment board.

As President Roosevelt explained his plan in detail at his press conference, it appeared that while the three will be on a theoretically equal footing, Hopkins will be in the driver's seat in a position to crack the whip.

Hopkins' Task.

While the actual work will be done by some 60 separate Government agencies, the job assigned to Hopkins will include that of seeing that proper progress is made on each project and of generally superintending the program after allotments are made.

The actual operation will be somewhat in the nature of a triple play—from Walker to Ickes to Hopkins.

Walker, according to the President's explanation, will receive all proposals, whether from Government agencies, States, municipalities or individuals. With the assistance of Government engineers and other experts, each project will be carefully examined and a complete report as to its legality, practicability and necessity will be made.

Each report then will be passed on to the allotment board, headed by Ickes, and including about 25 members. This board will decided whether it believes money should be allotted for the project.

Then Go to Roosevelt.

Recommendations for allotments then will go to President Roosevelt, who will either approve them, reject them or change them. When the President approves an allotment the money and the plans will go to the agency that is to do the work.

Copies of plans also will go to Hopkins. It will be his job to see that supplies are bought, that persons on relief rolls are hired and that the work is done within the required time.

Briefly, Walker will have charge of planning; the Ickes board, with approval of the President, will have charge of financing, and Hopkins will be the works superintendent.

Hopkins will remain as head of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, but he is expected to put a subordinate actually in charge of the work. This administration will care for needy unem-

Bequests Tax Increase Urged To Meet Bonus

Morgenthau Proposal for Graduated Levy Given Chill Reception.

Steeply graduated inheritance and gift taxes proposed by the Treasury to meet a threatened bonus drain received a chill reception on Capitol Hill yesterday as the Senate squared off for a bonus vote, probably next week.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., sent his suggestions for a $200,000,000 to $800,000,000 revenue bill to Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee and Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Harrison made the Morgenthau letter public, displaying obvious disinterest. He pointed out that the House must originate revenue legislation, and his committee intends no early consideration of the proposal. His bonus compromise bill, he believes, will require no new levies.

Even less enthusiasm was shown in the House. In a responsible quarter it was stated again that the prospect of additional taxes this year is the one thing House tax students hope to avert. Unless a radical change develops in the revenue situation, the plan is to re-enact only about $420,000,000 in existing excise taxes.

The American Legion, sponsoring the Vinson bonus cash payment bill, meanwhile received a tactical advantage for their measure, as strategy was mapped for Senate bonus consideration. Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, a former national commander

Suicide in Filmland Killings Unpaid, He Wrote Home Here

Washington Mother of W. McC. Howard Reveals Difficulties He Had With Slain Employer, But Doubts Son Committed Puzzling Tragedies.

William McCauley Howard, 28, who committed suicide in Hollywood after killing two men for whom he had worked, said in letters to his parents in this city that he had been having difficulty in collecting his wages.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Howard, of 3654 Park place northwest, showed the letters to a Post reporter yesterday.

At the time of the triple shooting, Howard was working as secretary-chauffeur for Paul Ivar Wharton, Hollywood dress designer. Wharton was killed first. Thereafter, the police say, Howard shot and seriously wounded Henry E. Bolte, a law professor, and then turned the gun on himself.

Complained to Board.

Howard went to work for Bolte after being graduated from the University of California in 1933. At that time Bolte was preparing to run for Congress on the Democratic ticket.

Howard, in a letter to his parents, said his employer was holding out wages on him. Without mentioning any name, he said he had complained about his employer to the labor board. Then he added:

"Will settle with him later."

Leaving the employ of Bolte, Howard went to work as a laborer in a California camp. About two months ago, he told his parents he had obtained a job as secretary-chauffeur to Wharton, who had been forbidden to drive by the authorities.

He soon was complaining that Wharton also was failing to pay him his wages.

His Souvenirs Fill Room.

Mrs. Howard talked about her son yesterday while sitting in her tastefully furnished living room. All around her were reminders of him—souvenirs he had picked up in his cruises with the Naval Reserve.

"He never carried a gun," she said, "and he was very even-tempered. I believe he is just the victim of misleading circumstantial evidence."

Her son, Mrs. Howard said, was considered unusually bright. While attending Central High School here, she said, he finished the four-year course in three and a half years.

After leaving Central, she said, he attended a radio school and then

Crime Inquiry Votes Report; Keeps Secret

Closed Doors Bar Details; Full Committee to Act Wednesday.

The crime sub-committee of the House District Committee, meeting behind closed doors, adopted a report yesterday embodying its recommendations for better law enforcement in the National Capital.

When members of the sub-committee came together they had before them the rough draft of a report calling for a thorough shake-up in the city's law-enforcement agencies.

The draft, prepared by John R. Fitzpatrick, counsel for the sub-committee, recommended immediate removal from office of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and retirement of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and two of his assistants—Inspectors Thaddeus R. Bean and Albert J. Headley.

Furore at Headquarters.

Whether these recommendations remained intact in the report as it finally was adopted by the sub-committee could not be ascertained.

The sub-committee will ask the full House District Committee to concur in its recommendations at a meeting Wednesday.

Revelation of the recommendations in the rough draft yesterday morning caused a furore at police headquarters and at the courthouse. There have been recommendations before for the retiremnt of high

U. S. Jury Weighs Dutch Schultz Case

Question From Box Makes Defense Optimistic.

By the Associated Press.

Syracuse, N. Y., April 26.—The Dutch Schultz income-tax-evasion case tonight was in the hands of the Federal jury, which received it this morning.

The jury's return to the courtroom at 4:35 p. m. to have read a portion of the transcript dealing with the defendant's efforts to settle his case with the Government was hailed by the defense as "a very good sign."

The 12 men wanted "the exact language" used by William J. Hughes, defense attorney, in regard to the compromise effort, and Judge Frederick H. Bryant's reply.

Harnessing of Atomic Energy Brought Nearer by Scientist

Columbia Professor Tells of Experiments Bringing Savants Closer to Fathoming Secret That Would Replace All Other Sources of Power.

That much heralded hope of science—the release of atomic energy—was placed a step nearer yesterday when Dr. J. R. Dunning, of Columbia University, told the American Physical Society he has been able to release energy of 2,000,000 times the amount needed to start the process.

Scientists have predicted that if the atom's power could be released and harnessed to useful work, it would replace all of the world's present sources of power. They have estimated that the forces latent in a few drops of water would drive a great liner across the Atlantic.

Dr. Dunning told the group he has come much closer to finding the secret for obtaining this power than anyone has done before. His process consists of bombarding the cores of lithium atoms with neutrons, which are pieces of atoms. With it he has been able to free 2,000,000 times the energy from the lithium atoms as was used in the bombardment.

The factor which at present hinders the practical use of Dr. Dunning's method for the release of atomic power on a large scale is the scarcity of neutrons. They are now obtained from radon gas, which is given off by radium.

While in most previous atom-splitting work high-speed projectiles were used, Dr. Dunning was able to greatly increase the penetration of the neutrons by both slowing their speed and cooling them by accomplishing the bombardment in a bath of liquid air.

At the separate meeting of the American Geophysical Union, F. E. Mathes, of the Geological Survey, who is chairman of the union's committee on glaciers, declared the great glaciers of the Rocky Mountains apparently are melting away.

If the present rate keeps us, the scientist asserted, Glacier National Park, whose chief scenic attraction is these high ice rivers, will be without them in 25 years. However, he said, the glaciers of Alaska seem to be holding their own.

Scientists find ingenious methods to determine facts. Dr. Charles P. Olivier, of the University of Pennsylvania, wanted to find the speed at which winds blow in the stratosphere. He measured it through the speed of the smoke and fire trains left by meteors.

Mary McElroy Begs Executive To Spare Life of Her Kidnaper

By the United Press.

Jefferson City, Mo., April 26.—Only the tearful plea of Miss Mary McElroy tonight stood between Walter McGee, first kidnaper sentenced to death, and his execution May 10 for abducting her, two years ago, from the home of her father, H. F. McElroy, city manager of Kansas City.

The girl and her father urged Gov. Guy B. Park at the Capitol today to commute McGee's sentence to life imprisonment so Mary would not worry about his death. Two appeals to the Missouri Supreme Court have been denied.

Park heard them sympathetically and promised early consideration of their oral and written petitions.

Miss McElroy, whose distraction over McGee's severe sentence recently led her to flee from home, asked that McGee be spared from the gallows for her "peace of mind."

Judge McElroy suggested to the Governor that the "law had been vindiacted," ends of justice would be served by a life sentence and that the execution would only cause suffering to his daughter.

The elderly city manager and his daughter have traveled extensively during the last two years, but have been unable to rid Mary of the feeling that her testimony against McGee, his brother George, and Clarence Click resulted in the death sentence for Walter, life imprisonment for George and an eight-year term for Click. Recently she won her father's important influence to McGee's cause.

Clarence Stevens, a fourth member of the kidnaping gang which took Miss McElroy from a bath tub on May 27, 1933, and held her for 29 hours until $30,000 ransom was paid, has not been apprehended.

God Revealed Through Hitler, Say Nazis at Anti-Church Rally

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 26.—Leaders of the rapidly growing Germanic pagan faith movement boldly rejected Christianity tonight at a Nazi sanctioned rally and said God had "revealed Himself to us" through Adolf Hitler.

Jacob Wilhelm Hauer, spiritual leader of the movement, told an overflow audience at the gigantic sports palast that Christianity is not the true religion of Germans, who united under Adolf Hitler because of their longing for the "Germanic" faith. Dissenters were ejected.

"Christianity says there is only one way to God and whoever does not believe in it is lost," Hauser asserted. "Such a claim leads to confessionalism, from which is sprung all evils that afflicted the religious history of the German people in the past.

"God has not revealed himself to the so-called chosen people alone," Hauer declared, "but also to us through our Fuehrer (Hitler), to enable us to accomplish our great mission in the world."

When Count Ernst Reventlow said churches year by year were losing ground and their resistance to the Germanic faith must be conquered, shouts of "Never!" arose.

Ten dissenters, believed theological students, were hustled away.

Nazis earlier clapped three more leading churchmen into jail at the end of the two-day meeting of the executive council of the confessional (opposition) synod here. They were the Rev. Wilhelm Harnish, whose house Nazi agents vainly searched for correspondence with foreign newspapermen; the Rev. Mr. Prastorious, who has been issuing a confidential weekly letter to ministers of the synod's Berlin district, and Supt. Gotthold Bronisch, office manager of the Berlin organization of confessional clergymen.

U. S. Must Help To Escape War, Stimson Holds

Cooperation With Powers Imperative, Former Secretary Asserts.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Cooperative action between the United States and other nations to prevent war was declared last night by former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson to be the only sure means by which this country can keep out of another international conflict.

Mr. Stimson spoke before the American Society of International Law. Not only did he flay the isolationists and nationalists, but he urged that this Government at once formally notify the world that in the event of any crisis to peace it would be ready to consult on steps to prevent hostilities.

Furthermore, he would have this Government make it clear to other nations that if it concurred in their judgment as to the nation responsible for a breach of the peace "we will refrain from any steps by our Government in protecting our neutral trade which will tend to defeat their efforts at restoring peace."

Policy Termed Powerful.

Thus Mr. Stimson not only indorsed the Hull-Davis proposal promulgated at Geneva in May, 1933, but he would go further, in that he did not attach to this policy the condition that Europe join in a general disarmament agreement. Such a policy by the United States, he maintained, would be "at all times a powerful reassurance to the cause of peace."

Mr. Stimson agreed with other speakers at the international law society's meeting that this country's traditional neutrality policy had become outmoded, but he held the problem of neutrality to be "a subordinate problem"—the real one being "to prevent war from arising, not how to act after it has arisen."

Mr. Stimson spoke at the evening session of the society's annual meeting, dedicated to a discussion of neutrality in all its aspects. Assistant Secretary of Commerce John Dickinson was the other speaker. His topic was "Neutrality and International Economic Relations."

Asserting he was speaking as a member of the society rather than as a Government official, Mr. Dickinson agreed with Mr. Stimson that renunciation of neutral rights is no guarantee against war and that "the most sound and hopeful preventive of war, in spite of all difficulties, is the establishment and strengthening of institutions of international order which, in the slow course of time, will habituate the peoples of the world to the adjustment of conflicts of interests between nations by conference and compromise and adjudication."

Mr. Dickinson pointed out that "from war to war the claims of belligerents have been broadened until there is hardly a neutral right which can be insisted upon today without being challenged by a belligerent."

Grave Difficulties Cited.

But he cited grave difficulties in trying to escape from this situation. He predicted widespread injury to the country's economic structure should all trade with belligerents in a major war be prohibited, citing what happened in 1807-09, when this was tried. He also cited objections to this country acquiescing in belligerent interference with neutral activities.

He suggested a policy of negotiation and compromise over neutral rights with belligerents as a solution of the problem, pointing out "there is no necessary reason why negotiation and compromise with relation to neutral rights should lead to armed conflict." He proposed empowering the President now to enter into agreements protecting our trade should war break out abroad.

Earlier in the day Prof. Edwin D. Dickinson, of the University of California Law School, declared that the country should prepare at once for a practical neutrality, adding that "if we permit ourselves to drift into neutrality we shall almost certainly drift into war." The present policy—"if we have one"—he asserted, is "neither coherent nor realistic, and our legislation is a thing of shreds and patches."

Warfare Embargo Advised.

He contended the situation demanded a policy under which the Government would prohibit the export to belligerents of ships, aircraft, tanks and all other munitions of war. Government control of the munitions industry should be assumed whenever that is necessary or desirable, he asserted. He further suggested forbidding American ships to carry commodities to belligerents and argued the Government in advance should make it clear that "the hazards are to be borne by the individuals who engage in that trade."

Prof. Josef L. Kunz of the University of Toledo presented a paper designed to show that a state of neutrality had not been made impossible by the League of Nations. Lester H. Woolsey, former State Department solicitor, discussed "Neutral Persons and Property on the High Seas in Time of War."

Dr. James Brown Scott, president of the society, called attention to the article of Charles Warren on "Neutrality to Depend on Contraband Rules" in The Washington Post yesterday. Prof. Philip C. Jessup, of Columbia University, read a portion of that article to the society. Mr. Warren, one of the foremost students of the neutrality problem, was unable to accept a place on the society's program because of a trip to California.

War Likened to Fire.

Mr. Stimson maintained that in the modern world "war has become like a prairie fire which will spread with great rapidity and become immeasurably destructive." Consequently, he contended, economic and social changes have made it necessary to have collective or cooperative action by all nations to prevent or minimize war.

The former Secretary of State contended that this country's traditional neutrality is not only no insurance against being drawn into a major war, but "is an actual danger toward causing us to be involved." But the recognition of that fact, he added, is not a solution of the problem. The suffering of war is shared by nearly all nations, whether they participate or not, he asserted.

"The world has been tied together," Mr. Stimson said, "and the sooner we face that fact and stop talking about self-sufficiency, the sooner we shall be ready to make intelligent progress upon this question of war. The idea that the world can be divided permanently into a lot of watertight compartments, each one insulated from the troubles of its neighbors, flies into the face of every fact which we have on our recovery program today."

The result of this, he continued, is that when a serious war breaks out anywhere in the world "we are likely to be gravely hurt whatever we do." The theory, he said, that "we can save ourselves entirely by isolation is an economic fantasy—worthy of the ostrich who thinks that he is hidden when he buries his head in the sand." War can be prevented only by cooperation.

Much Promotion Suggested.

The first duty is to get that idea "into the heads of our countrymen," he maintained. Illustrative of the amount of education needed, he asserted, was the defeat of the World Court before the Senate earlier this year. He went on to cite the proposal for consultation and non-interference with the punishment of an aggressor nation.

In conclusion Mr. Stimson asserted that "neutrality offers no certain road for keeping out of war," adding that "the only certain way to keep out of a great war is to prevent that war from taking place and the only hope of preventing war or even successfully restricting it is by the earnest, intelligent and unselfish cooperation of the nations of the world toward that end.

"Until America is willing with sympathy and intelligence to do her part in such an endeavor," he added, "the life of our whole modern civilization may be at the mercy of the next war."

Between You and Me

Running Circles Around Work Relief; Publicity Agents; Regimented Publishers.

By Raymond Clapper

They were trying to figure out the works-relief set-up which had just been outlined in full for the first time. Mr. Roosevelt explained it in terms of circles. He suggested the reporters draw their own little charts as he talked. First, the great big spot at the top. That's the quarter back. Then a row of 60 little circles at the bottom. Those are the various Government agencies which will handle the actual work projects.

In between are three large circles, not so large as the one at the top. They are, respectively, Frank C. Walker, chairman of the applications division; Secretary Ickes, chairman of the allotment division, and Harry Hopkins, chairman of the progress division. Then numerous dotted lines running up and down and crosswise, doubling back on each other. Those are several hundred thousand projects and $4,000,000,000 shuttling back and forth to take the unemployed off of relief and put them to work.

* * * *

On paper it looks comparatively simple as those things go in Washington. But after you have the big circles and the little circles all neatly drawn, you find out that in the row of little circles some should be larger than others because some will have more money to spend. Also the three large circles may not tell the whole story because some believe that Hopkins will be the dominating figure in the actual operation of the machinery, that Walker will be more concerned with keeping peace in the family and that Ickes will be somewhat more bottled up than heretofore. One purpose of the three large circles of equal size, it is widely suspected, is to keep all of the prima donnas happy and give them equal rating—at least on paper.

At any rate, the conference produced the oddest-looking batch of reporters' notes that ever came out of a White House press conference. Covered with circles, they needed only pin holes to be mistaken for Hauptmann's ransom notes.

* * * *

These are bad days for the large army of Government publicity agents. Newspaper publishers in New York have been making speeches and adopting resolutions against them this week. In the Senate a resolution has been drafted proposing an investigation of the Government publicity machinery. And Mr. Roosevelt, in outlining his works program, made it clear that he hopes the news of the decisions on projects will come from the Walker headquarters.

Every Government official is anxious to obtain as large a slice of works money as possible and most of these officials have publicity men, each of whom naturally tries to build up his chief as a big, important figure. Having served as a subordinate in Washington in years gone by, Mr. Roosevelt knows all of the tricks and he is hopeful that as the works program gets under way there won't be too much news of conflict and disappointed hopes filtering out. Perhaps it is natural that he should feel inclined to pull down the shades over the goldfish bowl and let only the master's voice be heard. But Washington has about 500 curious newspaper reporters whose purpose here is to find out what is going on and report it. Furthermore, it has not yet been demonstrated that it is against the public interest to have full information as to what is going on, provided only that it is accurate.

* * * *

While the subject of the freedom of the press is up, it might be a good idea if the newspaper publishers balked at the attempt within the business to regiment their opinions. The American Newspaper Publishers Association, composed of practically all daily newspaper publishers in the United States has been holding a convention in New York. It is composed of newspapers of all political complexions. Yet the organization, through acceptance of reports from committees, went on record as opposing much of the New Deal and numerous pending measures such as the Wagner labor disputes bill, and the 30-hour week bill, questioned the social security bill, and condemned many features of NRA and AAA legislation.

Such action naturally could be interpreted by Congress as a reflection of the editorial attitude of the newspapers of the country when it is questionable if there is any such unanimity. If freedom of the press means anything it means the freedom of editors of individual newspapers to take such positions with respect to public questions as seems to be in the public interest. There is no more reason why they should be regimented by a trade association, through resolutions drawn by a handful of persons and put through with a whoop, than be regimented by the Government.

* * * *

The report that Chairman Fletcher of the Republican national committee has asked Herbert Hoover to simplify the party's position by closing the door to renomination is not true. He has been asked by plenty of people to do it, but feels that is something for Mr. Hoover alone to decide.

* * * *

Senator Nye, of North Dakota, came back from Father Coughlin's Detroit mass meeting convinced that the radio priest is interested not so much in a third party as in influencing both of the old parties. The strategy is not unlike that of the old Nonpartican League in the Northwest, or of the Antisaloon League in its glory days. The trick was to go into primaries and nominate sympathetic candidates for as many offices as possible, working in both parties, or at least in the dominant party. He doesn't see the Coughlin movement as leading to a tie-up with Huey Long.

The handsome silvery tarpon which Larry Richey caught in Panama while he was White House secretary to Herbert Hoover disappeared from the fish pool in the Department of Commerce Building yesterday.

The first guess was that the Administration had finally routed out the last vestige of the Hoover Administration and was making way for some New Deal fish which President Roosevelt caught on his recent trip. But it wasn't that at all. The fish had been inside all winter and he was put into the outdoor pool to get some sunlight. It keeps his bones from becoming soft.

Publicity Set-up Under New Deal Facing Inquiry

Senators Plan Probe of Money Spent for Movies, Radio, Publications.

By Robert C. Albright.

A bipartisan move is under way in the Senate to force investigation of the New Deal's elaborate press relations set-up, its cost, personnel and methods, it was learned last night.

Bureau publications, including newspapers, magazines and circulars published in the departments, would have to justify their existence in law, under a resolution being framed for early introduction.

Radio relations between the Government and private concerns, as well as moving pictures produced under Federal auspices, would also be targets for the proposed Senate inquiry.

Old Law Cited.

While Glass is not sponsoring the proposed resolution, the plan is to refer it to his Senate Committee on Appropriations for inquiry.

"The departments may be upon notice hereafter that they have no lawful right to expend the money of the Government in that way," the Virginian told the Senate.

A law passed more than 20 years ago, now embodied in Title 5 of the United States Code, annotated, will be cited by those now drafting the resolution.

The code citation reads:

"Publicity experts not to be employed without specific appropriation. No money appropriated by any act shall be used for compensation of any publicity expert unless specifically appropriated for that purpose."

To Ask Accounting.

The coalition proposing the investigation will contend that this is not now being observed in various emergency agencies and in some of the old line departments.

They will ask that the Appropriations Committee determine how much of the money now being spent for Government publicity is authorized by law, and report back to the Senate, with recommendations.

The resolution will go beyond that, however, and ask an inquiry into so-called Government "house organs," such as the NRA's weekly newspaper, Blue Eagle, the AAA's News Digest and Consumers' Guide, and similar periodicals.

TVA, FHA Under Fire.

The motion-picture phase of the inquiry was said to be aimed particularly at the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Housing Administration, while Federal cooperation in radio broadcasts would be investigated on a broad front.

In his recent Senate speech, Senator Glass said he was informed that "there are more newspapermen now employed in the various bureaus of the Government than are employed on the newspapers themselves."

"Some of the bureaus are actually printing illustrated magazines, and one of them a tri-weekly newspaper," he declared.

"I personally know of one bureau which has a publicity branch and which has no more use for a publicity branch or agent than I have for some people I know."

Springfield Is Tense As 500 Picket Mine

Springfield, Ill., April 26 (AP).—Peaceful but menacing, 500 members of the Progressive Miners of America picketed the diggings where rival union miners were at work today and kept the capital on edge, fearful of another outbreak of the bitter Illinois mine-union feud.

Groups of pickets, most of them keeping back from the Woodside mine entrance, made no effort to stop members of the older union, the United Mine Workers of America, from digging coal for the Peabody Coal Co.

Several dozen policemen and deputy sheriffs, heavily armed, guarded the Woodside mine until nearly all U. M. W. A. members had arrived and the pickets dispersed.

Canada's 'Mounties' Kill Fugitive in Gun Battle

Calgary, Alberta, April 26 (AP).—David Knox, farmer of the Drumheller district, was shot and killed this afternoon after standing off for two hours Royal Canadian Mounted Police seeking him for the killing of one Mountie officer and the wounding of another.

Knox, two hours before the gun battle started, shot and fatally wounded Corpl. Michael Moriarity, veteran member of the R. C. M. P., and wounded Constable Roy Allan.

Immediately after the shooting Knox disappeared. Constable Allan sought help from Drumheller. Reinforcements were sent from the town and located Knox in a granary near his home. He opened fire. For two hours shots were exchanged until at last a fusillade of bullets crashing through the granary fatally wounded the wanted man.

Wirt Urges Colleges Give Classes in 'Isms'

Gary, Ind., April 26 (AP).—College courses in Communism, Fascism, Nazism and Socialism as well as the present economic order were advocated tonight by Dr. William A. Wirt, who stirred up a tempest in 1934 with charges that certain "brain trusters" were plotting a revolution.

The Gary educator expressed the belief any student examining intelligently the various economic systems would end by choosing the existing order.

J. D. Barnum Chosen as Head Of Publishers

Free Press Continuance Is Held Chief Concern; Warning on 7(a).

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—The American Newspaper Publishers Association, electing Jerome D. Barnum, publisher of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post-Standard, as president, adjourned its forty-ninth annual meeting today after three days of sessions devoted largely to a review of legislative trends and the possible dangers of Governmental encroachment upon the freedom of the press.

Barnum, previously vice president of the association, succeeded Howard Davis of the New York Herald-Tribune. Davis retired after three terms as president, but will continue on the board of directors for another two years.

Following upon his election to the presidency, Barnum emphasized that freedom of the press was a prime concern.

Freedom Main Problem.

"The main problem before the newspapers of the country," he said, "is maintaining the freedom of the press. The work that has been so ably initiated and successfully carried through in the past five years by the retiring president, Howard Davis, will be continued in so far as I am humanly able to do it."

James G. Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner, was elected vice president.

E. H. Harris, publisher of the Richmond (Ind.) Palladium-Item, was re-elected secretary, and Walter M. Dear, of the Jersey City (N. J.) Jersey Journal, was re-elected treasurer.

The board of directors, with expressions of regret, accepted the resignation of Hilton U. Brown, of the Indianapolis News, who had served continuously as a director for more than 30 years.

Four board members, whose two-year terms expired, were re-elected unanimously. They are F. J. Burd of the Vancouver (B. C.) Daily Province, W. G. Chandler of Scripps-Howard newspapers; W. C. Macfarlane of the Chicago Tribune, and Charles H. Taylor of the Boston Globe.

In its concluding business, the association heard the report of Emanuel Levi of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times for the publisher members of the Newspaper Industrial Board.

Labor Warning.

The report stated that if section 7(a) of NRA, or a similar section, was extended after June 16, there was a possibility, if labor disputes are not left to the Newspaper Industrial Board or a similar body, that "the determination of such questions will rest with the National Labor Relations Board or some other politically appointed body from outside the business."

The association adopted the report of its postal committee, which announced years of study refuted charges that newspaper postal rates were too low. An agitation for upward rate revision had been detected, Mr. Stahlman, the committee chairman, stated.

New Chain Letters Hint Denver Postal 'Collapse'

Denver, April 26 (AP).—A "collapse of the Denver postal service" has been threatened because of a new flood of "send-a-dime" chain letters, Postmaster J. O. Stevic said today as the volume of mail reached a new all-time record.

"There were 67,000 more pieces of mail on the pick-up table today than on a normal day when 180,000 pieces of mail are handled," Stevic said.

2 Dead, 2 Wounded In Lovers' Quarrel

Puerto Rican Runs Amuck at New York Wharf.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—Martinez Flores, 32-year-old Puerto Rican relief worker, late today shot and seriously wounded Josephine Gonzales, 30; killed her sister, Mrs. Mary Domina, 31, and wounded the latter's husband, Joseph Domina, 30, before sending two bullets into his own neck, taking his life.

The multiple shooting occurred at Eighty-sixth street and East End avenue after the quartet left a ferryboat from Welfare Island.

Miss Gonzales had been in the city hospital there and her sister and sister's husband had gone to meet her upon her release. Flores had also gone over to the island, unknown to the others, and returned with the party on the ferry.

The shooting followed his attempted reconciliation with Miss Gonzales. Police said that a note found on the man stated his intention of killing himself, blaming the Dominas for breaking up a romance with Miss Gonzales.

Utilities Executive Warns of Power Regulation.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee was told yesterday by a public utility spokesman that under guise of legislation to abolish holding companies it was being led into support of legislation fastening drastic regulatory laws on the power industry.

Edmund W. Wakelee, of Newark, vice president of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, assailed the regulatory features.

Fred N. Oliver, counsel for the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, protested that the bill threatened the stability of utility investments made by the banks on behalf of their 14,000,000 depositors.

20,000 to Hear Long Give Talk To Farm Group

Barb Aimed at Coughlin by Head of Farmers' Holiday Unit.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, April 26.—Amid talk of a national third party movement, the National Farmers Holiday Association leaders tonight prepared an enthusiastic welcome for Senator Huey P. Long, and shot a barb toward the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit.

Milo Reno, president of the association, took umbrage at the statement of the Detroit priest that Coughlin's Union for Social Justice would not be presented at the farmers' gathering, and said:

"The radio priest has pulled a boner, Father Coughlin and his support was for the objectives of the National Farmers Union rather than those of the Holiday group."

"Anxious to Assist."

Later Reno called for L. M. Peet, convention promotion director, who was in conference with H. Ralph Burton, general counsel of the National Patriotic League and Coughlin's personal attorney, and B. F. Stephenson, of Detroit, one of the priest's advisers, and said:

"I did not expect Father Coughlin to attend this convention of the Farm Holiday Association because he was our headline speaker last year, although we would have been very happy to have had him here.

"There was no difference of opinion in the broad objectives and, as for a preference between the National Farmers Union and the National Holiday Association, they are motivated by the same desires and directed to the same end. As far as I know, they are both anxious to assist Father Coughlin in any way they can."

20,000 Expected Today.

As the debate continued, Senator Long, "main attraction of the big show," was en route to Des Moines from Washington. Long is to give the principal address of the meeting at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow, at which Reno expects an attendance of approximately 20,000 persons.

Both Burton and Stephenson earlier had declared they were here to attend the sessions "as a courtesy to Mr. Reno" and were not representing Father Coughlin. Burton predicted formation of a third party for the 1936 elections if independent factions can agree on basic principles and meet on a common ground.

The attorney agreed with Reno's statements the leaders of the groups probably were best represented by Senator Long, Father Coughlin and Dr. F. E. Townsend, author of the revolving pension plan.

Convention sessions are to open at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Billed together with Senator Long for the afternoon meeting are Reno, John Bosch, national holiday vice president, of Atwater, Minn., and E. E. Kennedy, national secretary, of Kankakee, Ill.

Long's subject has been announced as "Campaign Promises—You Make Us Make Them and You Make Us Break Them."

Governor to Be Tapped by Omicron Delta Kappas at Maryland U.

Gov. Harry W. Nice will be "tapped" for membership in the University of Maryland chapter of Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership fraternity, it was announced yesterday at College Park.

The "tapping" will take place at the semi-annual ceremonies at the university gymnasium, Monday, May 6. Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the school, and H. C. Byrd, vice president, will attend the exercises.

In a letter of acceptance to Denzel Davis, of Baltimore, president of the Maryland University chapter, Gov. Nice asked that he be excused from addressing the gathering.

The honorary fraternity's spring ceremonies, at which students whose names will be kept secret are selected for membership, will be held jointly with the inauguration of student government association officials.

The student officers to be inaugurated are Louis Ennis, Long Branch, N. J., president; Robert Beall, Hyattstown, Md., vice president; June Barnsley, Rockville, secretary; Walter Webb, Vienna, Md., president of the Men's League, and Ruth Hickey, Pope's Creek, Md., president of the Women's League.

Frank Duggan, of Baltimore, will be inaugurated as president of Omicron Delta Kappa, succeeding Davis.

Physicians at Emergency Hospital said Leonard suffered more from the shock of striking the water than from water in his lungs. He has an even chance to recover.

controlling of production or distribution."

Could Still 'Get Together.'

Important exemptions from the anti-trust stipulation were provided, however. Industries still would have authority to get together and agree upon a code prohibiting unfair business practices, provided price-fixing and production control were not included.

These codes could include:

"Such provisions as may be found by the President to be necessary and proper to protect small enterprise against discrimination or oppression, or to deter the growth of monopolies, which may include provisions against unfair competition resulting from discriminatory or oppressive price fixing by concerted or individual action."

Provisions for the collection and publication of information helpful in maintaining fair competition.

Provisions for regulation of production "in exceptional industries (including natural resources industries) and in emergencies" to stave off a slump in the industry.

Price Regulation Provided.

The alternate plan for holding the NRA law in its present form until the Supreme Court has had an opportunity to rule on it, supplying a court test as the basis for future NRA legislation, was proposed in the Finance Committee by Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri.

It received strong backing, and Chairman Harrison agreed at once to confer with the President about it. Meantime, he would make no promises. Even if the President concurs in a simple temporary extension of NRA, Harrison indicated he would not favor calling it up in the Senate unless NRA opposition made no drive to amend the resolution. In the event of a fight, he said he would offer the amendments introduced yesterday.

Nye Promises Fight.

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, later told reporters he would permit no such temporary extension to go through without a fight to restore anti-trust laws to full strength, and place a prohibition on price fixing.

The Senate Finance Committee will meet for what promises to be an NRA showdown on Monday. At that time, Senator Clark said, he will move again for approval of his temporary NRA extension resolution. All the benefits of a Supreme Court test of the present law would be lost, he contended, if the act in its present form is inoperative at the time the court rules.

Supreme Court action was recently delayed by the Justice Department decision to abandon a lumber code test through the Belcher case. The real test will come on the Schechter poultry case, which has not been argued.

Colt Action Called Unusual.

Richberg yesterday telegraphed the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, opening its annual meeting here, that the NRA board should assume a fair share of responsibility for the "many discouragements and difficulties" encountered by the lumber industry.

The Senate munitions inquiry into Colt Firearms Co. labor troubles followed removal of the Blue Eagle from the concern by the NRA, on recommendation of the National Labor Relations Board. Chairman Nye said he wanted to find out why the War Department wasn't notified of the removal.

Violation of the collective bargaining clause was charged by the Labor Board. Weeks after removal of the Eagle, Richberg entered negotiations with the company in an effort at agreement. An investigation by the Munitions Committee at that time was delayed, at the request of the President.

Francis Biddle, chairman of the National Labor Board, yesterday told the committee it was contrary to custom for the NRA to delay notification of Government departments in such cases, so they could suspend purchases.

Speaking for the War Department, Capt. Herman U. Wagner testified that the War Department, even though it were notified, could continue machine gun purchases if this were essential to national defense.

Richberg's statement that a question existed whether the Colt Firearms Co. had violated the code, implied there may be restoration of the company's Blue Eagle.

Senator Nye last night declared the Springfield Armory should be awarded War Department arms orders heretofore given to the Colt company.

"I think the Springfield Armory should be allocated this work so as to make certain the country is going to have what it needs," he said.

"If the Colt company can play with the law the way it has in times of peace, there is no telling what it might not do in times of war. I can't emphasize too strongly that I believe this business should be taken away from private firms like Colt."

Paris, Moscow Pact Accord Due Today

ing the two pre-war allies, the new agreement promises France the help of Russia's huge red army and Russia the aid of France's blue-uniformed poilus in the event either is attacked.

It is designed to "backstop" the League of Nations and bolster the security of the two nations in the face of Adolph Hitler's "regenerated" German army.

The pact would come into effect, it is understood, in the event of "flagrant aggression," the League of Nations council being simultaneously called into hurried sessions to take the situation in hand.

A possible joker in the pact was seen in the addition to it, on the insistence of France, of provision that neither nation would be "obliged to take action contrary to previous pledges."

Thus under the Locarno treaty, which binds Germany, France, Britain and Italy, either of the latter two nations could veto any French attack on Germany in support of besieged Russia on the grounds that France thereby would become an aggressor under their treaty.

Nevertheless, the pact was hailed as "a long step" on the road back to the close pre-war relations of France and Russia.

Negotiators for both powers have been many weeks at work in an effort to find mutually acceptable bases for the treaty, and several times they appeared on the point of failure, only to have Laval and the Soviet foreign commissioner, Maxim Litvinoff, convince their respective governments that changes were preferable to complete failure in the face of Germany's heavy rearmament.

In addition to difficulties of squaring the pact with the Locarno convention and obligations under the League of Nations covenant, the French government was beset by fiery nationalists who demanded the rooting out of Communist propaganda as the price of signing the treaty.

It was said on good authority tonight that Russia agreed to "muzzle" revolutionary propaganda in France in accordance with demands made by Laval.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 27 (Saturday).—Two leading London newspapers said simultaneously today Germany has torn up another section of the Versailles treaty by ordering the immediate construction of a fleet of small submarines.

Statements that Germany had violated the ban on submarines imposed upon her by the allies were made by the diplomatic correspondents here of both the News-Chronicle and the Herald, who indicated full confidence in their source of information.

Following close upon the recent publication of a mass of information purporting to show Germany's air force is twice as strong as Great Britain's, the allegations provide new fuel for the arms debate in Parliament next Thursday.

Lynching Foes In Senate Win 1-Vote Victory

Ballot Assures Further Fight for Passage of U. S. Curb.

By the Associated Press.

Senate advocates of a Federal curb on lynching yesterday scored a one-vote victory, a victory hailed by those who met defeat as destined to be as short lived as it was close.

By 34 to 33, Northern and Southern Senators beat down a motion to adjourn, which, had it carried, automatically would have sidetracked the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill.

The vote, which in the instance of some Senators was influenced by plans for considering the question of paying the soldiers' bonus, capped three days of filibustering by a determined group of Southerners.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, offered the adjournment motion.

Defeated, Robinson moved that the Senate recess until today. This was done.

The significance of all the parliamentary jockeying was, principally, that had the advocates of the lynching bill lost on the adjournment motion the bill would not necessarily have retained top place on the Senate calendar.

On Monday, at the latest, the Senate will be offered a choice between going on with the lynching question or taking up the bonus bill. Heavy odds were on a decision for the latter.

Prior to the vote Robinson had threatened to keep the Senate in session all day today in an effort to break the parliamentary deadlock. The ballot, when it did come, found the Southerners, with two exceptions, voting solidly for adjournment. Logan, of Kentucky, and Bachmann, of Tennessee, broke away from their colleagues to vote "no."

The bill would provide severe penalties for local officers for conspiring to turn prisoners over to lynch mobs, or for failing to give their prisoners proper protection. Counties would be made liable for damages to the dependents of persons lynched.

Yes, His Honor Has Seen The Name Somewhere

"Issue a warrant for John P. McMahon," ordered Judge John P. McMahon in Traffic Court yesterday.

The judge smiled and turned to spectators.

"This warrant is not for the presiding judge—I am not guilty."

Then it was explained. Policeman R. O. Bankert, of the Traffic Bureau, "ticketed" the car of a John P. McMahon on downtown Tenth street. McMahon, however, failed to answer the charge in court—hence the warrant order from Judge McMahon.

Ex-Marine Asks Jury On Assault Charge of the legion, will move to substitute the Vinson payment-in-full bill for the Harrison compromise when the bonus reaches the Senate.

This should give the first test Senate vote to the Vinson measure. Indication of strong sentiment for this bill was supplied in the Senate Finance Committee Thursday, where members voted 13 to 4 to substitute it for the inflationary Patman bill, passed by the House. On a later vote the Harrison compromise displaced it.

Harrison, Patman May Combine.

Supporters of the $2,660,000,000 Harrison payment-in-bonds-and-cash compromise, and advocates of the Patman bill may combine against the Vinson measure on the first Senate vote. If they beat the Clark amendment, the next vote would come on the Harrison plan. Only by defeating that also would the Patman forces be assured of a direct vote on the House bill, it was said.

Secretary Morgenthau's revenue-raising proposals yesterday were in support of a statement made this week before the Senate Finance Committee that all of the pending bonus proposals will require new taxes, in his opinion.

Morgenthau suggested a system that would collect from bequests at both ends—first, from the estate, under the existing tax law, and second, from the inheritance itself, under a proposed tax graduated in close conformance with the existing income tax scale.

Would Slice Fortunes.

Following redistribution of wealth principles often expressed by the President, experts pointed out that such a plan would whittle the larger inheritances down to a fraction of their bulk.

The present estate tax is graduated up to 60 per cent on estates of $10,000,000 or more. This would slice $6,000,000 from a $10,000,000 inheritance. Should the Government take 60 per cent of the rest under the proposed inheritance tax law, an individual to which the fortune was bequeathed would receive only about $1,600,000.

Text of Morgenthau Letter.

Morgenthau said he was simply outlining "a revenue measure which would provide funds for the payment of the soldiers' bonus."

His letter read:

"1. From the standpoint of immediate feasibility no less than that of our financial objectives, the best source of additional revenue at this juncture would be a system of taxes on the receipt of inheritances and gifts.

"Such a system, supplementing our present estate and gift taxes, would fit in well with the rest of our Federal tax structure; would add to its balance and strength, and would not materially interfere with the present estate and gift taxes.

"2. The program that is here suggested would be relatively simple to formulate and to administer; yet it would be effective. In brief, it is, with certain qualifications, to subject all inheritances and gifts to a system of rates similar to that of the Federal income tax law.

Progressive Tax Urged.

"The result of this proposal would be that gifts and inheritances would be taxed at progressive rates, and, under it, the Congress could provide for the effective rates to vary with the tax-paying capacity of the recipients of bequests and gifts. On very large bequests or gifts during a single year—$1,000,000 or more—if the existing income tax rates are applied, the total tax would approximate 60 per cent.

"To prevent the necessity for hasty liquidation of large properties in order to pay the tax, it might be provided that inheritance taxes be payable in a convenient number of installments.

"The preliminary estimate is that such a tax would yield in 1936 approximately $300,000,000 and might range upward to $600,000,000 annually. Our present estate tax is estimated to yield some $190,000,000 in 1936. It may be observed that, from estate and inheritance taxes, England, with a population of approximately one-third that of the United States, and a smaller per capita wealth and income, collected more than $400,000,000 in death duties in the last fiscal year.

Roosevelt Hears Hospital Plans

Proposed extension of hospitalization to mental patients was discussed with President Roosevelt yesterday by Chairman Rankin of the House World War veterans' legislation committee and Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans' Administration chief.

"Our talk probably will have good results," Rankin told reporters. "We may be able to eliminate the shortage of beds for mental cases without new legislation."

The problem will be discussed by Hines and officers of several patriotic organizations Monday at a meeting of the Rankin committee.

Shushan, indicted for alleged willful attempts to evade income tax payments, is scheduled to go on trial May 6 before Judge Borah.

Others under indictment are Seymour Weiss, president of the Board of Port Commissioners and treasurer of Senator Long's State political organization, and State Senator Jules Fisher, uncle of Joe Fisher and close friend and advisor of the Long administration.

Joining an expedition that intrigues and perhaps excites the heartfelt sympathy of the average layman, these hardy pioneers generally relished the opportunity of helping Uncle Sam launch the most pretentious of his rural rehabilitation projects.

Most of the 280 persons, comprising 67 families, come from the northern Minnesota woods and the Canadian border country.

Woman Will Go To the Gallows Along With Son

Sentenced in Delaware for Insurance Crime Bared by Accident.

By the Associated Press.

Georgetown, Del., April 26.—For their crime committed more than 7 years ago, a 52-year-old mother and her oldest son must pay with their lives.

Sentence of death on the gallows was passed today upon Mrs. May H. Carey and Howard Carey, 27, for slaying her brother, Robert Hitchens, 55, in a plot to collect $2,000 in life insurance.

Mrs. Carey screamed as the court imposed the penalty, ignoring the mercy recommendation of the jury.

Another son, James Carey, 23, was sentenced to life imprisonment for the same crime.

In a last-minute plea, Howard blamed his mother for coercing him into the commission of murder.

Frederick P. Whitney, their counsel, said he will appeal next week to the board of pardons and that he feels confident the board at least will commute Howard's sentence to life.

He could appeal to the Delaware Supreme Court, he said, "but it would have to be a point of error made in the court's charge to the jury as a basis for a Supreme Court appeal and that he is satisfied the charge was within the court's limits.

Mrs. Carey's execution on June 7 in Sussex County jail will be the first time a white woman has been hanged in Delaware.

A detective's questioning of a third son, Lawrence, 21, when he was arrested last December for breaking and entering, reopened the 1927 slaying mystery. The woman and her two older sons were arrested and subsequently confessed and gave the details of the crime.

Before sentencing her, the court denied a plea for a new trial and then asked if she had anything to say. In a low, broken voice, she faltered the request that she would like to have Warden Hugh J. Smith, of the county jail, tell what he knew about the case.

Smith was in the room and when asked what he knew of the slaying he quietly informed the court he knew nothing.

Chief Justice D. J. Layton informed Mrs. Carey the court felt her crime was one of the "most vicious in the criminal annals of the State" and that the law makes no exceptions as to sex.

Confessions brought out that the woman and her two sons lay in wait for Hitchens in his home near Frankford. She wielded a sledge hammer and Howard fired a shot into the man's head. An oaken club also was used. Two days later his broken body was found in the house.

Scene and Principals in Hollywood Shootings

Above is the Hollywood apartment of Henry E. Bolte, law instructor at the University of California, where Bolte was shot, police believe, by William Howard, whose home was reported to be in Washington. Howard was alleged to have killed Paul Wharton, designer of clothes for the film colony. Howard killed himself after the double shooting.

obtained a position with the Coast and Geodetic Survey. After three years with the Government, he took the advice of his parents and enrolled at the University of California.

Anxious to Come Home.

Mrs. Howard said her son wrote her last Christmas, saying he was anxious to come back to Washington, but he couldn't come back, he explained, unless he could find two other persons to pay part of the expenses in return for riding in his automobile on the trip East.

The Los Angeles newspapers, Howard told his mother, refused to carry advertisements for such share-the-expense motor journeys.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard said they had asked their son's uncle, Edward L. Baker, of Los Angeles, to supervise his burial in that city.

Hollywood, April 26.—Police sought three mysterious witnesses tonight in one of the film colony's most baffling murders, in which two were dead and one dying as an aftermath of a young men's altercation at a fashionable studio dinner party.

Search spread throughout southern California for N. C. McDermitt, a sailor, described as the "tall, blond man" believed to be the only living witness to the slaying of Paul Wharton, 25-year-old studio designer and former protege of Aimee Semple McPherson.

Meanwhile police sought an unidentified "Hollywood countess"—who may be a man or a woman—and a woman whose fingerprints were found on a cocktail glass in Wharton's studio-apartment in the heart of the film colony.

Wharton was found dead with three bullets in his chest after a dinner party at his apartment, attended by William M. Howard, formerly Wharton's chauffeur, who once lived in Washington, and McDermitt, a sailor from the U. S. S. Pennsylvania.

Capt. William J. Bright, of the Los Angeles County sheriff's office, said Howard apparently shot Wharton, then fled with McDermitt. Six hours later Howard waylaid Henry E. Bolte, 39-year-old law professor, in front of his apartment house and shot him twice through the back. Howard then sent a bullet through his brain.

Bolte, whose connection with the case remains a mystery, was near death in a hospital tonight, bullets in his spine and shoulder.

Meanwhile, police delved into the relations of the three young men and Bolte in an effort to explain the tangle.

A dozen persons were questioned, including four arrested at a shack in the hills. The quartet—two men and two women—one of the latter dressed in men's clothing—were subsequently released.

Note books, examined by police, revealed minor financial transactions between the two slain men and Bolte and McDermitt, which led police to believe a quarrel over money may have caused the shooting.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Ada Wharton, Wharton's wealthy and invalid foster-mother, was able to give the only tangible clue to the first shooting.

She said she heard three shots and came from her bedroom in time to see "a blond man"—McDermitt, according to the police—flee from the dining room and leap through a window to a patch of shrubbery 20 feet below.

Wharton, shot twice through the heart, was crawling along a corridor toward a telephone, gasping "office—office—." He died before he reached the phone.

Second Shooting Reported.

While police were seeking to trace Howard, who apparently escaped from Wharton's studio-apartment just before Mrs. Wharton opened the door, reports of the second shooting were flashed.

Police believed at first that Howard had tracked Bolte to his apartment, thinking he was McDermitt, and attempted to kill him as the only witness to the shooting at Wharton's apartment.

Subsequent disclosures, however, modified this theory.

Bolte, entering his apartment at an early hour, saw a figure of a man in the shadows near the entrance. He caught a glimpse of the man's face, but did not recognize him.

As he stepped through the entrance, Howard fired twice. Mrs. Bolte, who had come to the door, screamed as Howard turned the gun on himself and sent a bullet through his brain.

While Bolte denied knowing Howard, Mrs. Bolte said he had been "well acquainted" with her younger sister, now living in Washington. She declined to give the girl's name.

Meanwhile, police pored through address books found on Howard's body, listing men's names and addresses in Shanghai, Honolulu, Newport Beach, Toluca Lake and other points More than a hundred names were listed.

They questioned Ethel Reuter, believed to be Wharton's cousin, in an effort to learn details of the young designer's relations with his slayer and McDermitt.

"The Countess" Hunted.

In Howard's effects, police found a cancelled check for $95 cashed by Bolte. They also found a telegram addressed to "The Countess" in Beverly Hills. Police were sent to determine the identity of this person.

Capt. Norris Stenslend said Wharton, who also was known as Paul Ivar, had been arrested for the asserted theft of a $5,000 diamond ring from Mrs. Ray Wolfe, of Beverly Hills. Wharton, born in Billings, Mont., came here in 1927. He was connected with Mrs. McPherson's Angelus Temple as a designer.

Subsequently, Mrs. Wharton, a wealthy and eccentric widow, became interested in his work and offered to share her luxurious apartment. Wharton established a designing studio and his associates claimed he designed dresses for Jean Harlow and Constance Bennett, actresses, as well as for motion-picture studios and several socially prominent Beverly Hills women.

Old Skeleton Found In Excavation Here

The gruesome discovery was made by John Field, colored laborer, of the 1100 block of Ninth street northwest.

Officials, after a preliminary inspection, said the age of the skeleton could not be determined, but that they believed it to have been a woman. The manner of death also remained a mystery last night.

local officials, but never on such a wholesale scale.

Maj. Brown commented as follows:

"I have received no official word of the committee's action. I would not consider retiring unless requested to do so by the District Commissioners.

Won't Quit Under Fire.

"Then I would step out only to avoid embarrassing the Commissioners. It would not be to my liking to retire at present—I would dislike retiring under fire."

Garnett told reporters he had nothing to say.

Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee, denied last night that she had arranged a conference with Attorney General Homer Cummings for the purpose of discussing the crime report. She was to talk with Cummings, she said, about a New Jersey matter.

"Resents" Speculation.

Yesterday's meeting of the crime sub-committee lasted for three hours. Afterward there were many rumors as to what recommendations had been adopted or rejected, but the members steadfastly refused to say what had been done.

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee, issued this statement:

"The sub-committee has agreed on its report, which will be submitted next Wednesday to the District Committee.

"The special committee deplores and resents speculation concerning its findings. Neither directly nor indirectly has the committee given out any information as to the contents of the report."

Garnett Awaits U. S. Police Court Report

United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett last night denied that the Department of Justice report on results of a six months' investigation of Police Court had reached his office. He said he had been informed the report was on its way.

The report, based on exhaustive investigation of the court's records and personnel, is said to leave in Garnett's hands the advisability of asking the District grand jury to investigate certain phases discovered by the investigators.

A drastic change in the manner of handling the court's records is understood to be in prospect.

Slaying of Girl, 11, Is Laid to Father

West Virginia Parent Held After Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

New Martinsville, W. Va., April 26.—The slaying of an 11-year-old girl was blamed by a coroner's jury today on her father, John Stull, 48.

"I've done a good job," a neighbor said he heard Stull exclaim a few minutes after his daughter, Mary Esther, was killed yesterday in the Stull kitchen with a shotgun.

Wetzel County authorities said they would ask for a sanity examination for Stull, a glass worker. He talked incoherently throughout the night in his cell, they said.

House Passes $460,000,000 Navy Measure

Bill Is Sent to Senate by Overwhelming Vote; Foes Crushed.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

A treaty strength Navy neared reality yesterday as the House passed a $460,000,000 appropriation bill for the sea fighting forces.

The measure was sent to the Senate with a booming chorus of "ayes" which was so overwhelming a record vote was not taken. Big Navy men washed overboard all moves to curtail the scope of the bill.

Sentiment for a strong Navy was reflected in the 289 to 56 roll call vote by which the House crushed a motion of Representative Sisson (Democrat), New York, to recommit the measure and reduce the total by 20 per cent.

As passed the bill carried the largest outlay for the Navy from regular sources—exclusive of PWA—granted in more than a decade. The total represented an increase of $172,000,000 over last year's appropriation.

The measure would authorize laying down of 24 ships, purchase of 55 new planes, an enlisted strength of 93,000, or 11,000 more than at present, and 500 additional midshipmen at Annapolis, or four instead of three appointments annually for each member of the House and Senate.

Boileau's Warning.

Representative Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin, was howled down when he sought to strike out all funds for ship building, or a total of $88,340,000.

"Do you know what you are doing?" Boileau cried.

"With this bill you are putting America on record that she is willing and ready to fight an offensive war. What good is a Navy except to convoy troops to foreign soil?

"Why don't you take some of this money and put the United States into position to fight a defensive war? The way to do that is to use it to build airplanes and then we can keep out of all these wars of aggression."

Administration spokesmen insisted the bill would merely enable Uncle Sam to build toward a treaty strength Navy by 1942. They described the measure as "purely a defensive bill."

Representative Kopplemann (Democrat), Connecticut, was outvoted by a wide margin when he sought to push through an amendment to delay all new ship construction until March 1, 1936, so this country could enter the next world naval conference "with clean hands."

Holds Tokyo Friendly.

Before the big majority began knocking down amendments Representative Luckey (Democrat), Washington, read an editorial from a Japanese newspaper criticizing coming naval maneuvers in the Pacific.

Hirosi Saito, the Japanese Ambassador, later said his government did not believe the war games were unfriendly.

"The Japanese government and our people," he said, "have never misunderstood the matter. They know that navies are navies and must be familiar with all waters.

"As they never have exercised in the North Pacific, it was clearly understood that units of the American fleet would want to go there."

The Ambassador discredited the possibility of war between this country and Japan.

"There is every reason why the United States should be on good terms with Japan," he added. "War between the United States and Japan would utterly ruin both countries. It could only play into the hands of others."

In its final form the bill carried $14,500,000 to begin construction work on the 24 vessels authorized. The item for that purpose, originally $29,000,000, was cut in half by the appropriations committee with the comment that the remainder could be granted at the next session.

Missing Link Hunted In the Atomic Theory

Dr. Mohler Untiring in Efforts to Produce New Sort of Helium.

A slight gray-haired physicist, with the patience of Job, bends over his laboratory table and his test tubes at the Bureau of Standards daily in his tireless search for the missing link of the atomic theory.

He is Dr. Fred L. Mohler, who for the past six months has been trying to produce a new sort of helium by firing 50,000-volt charges of electricity into heavy hydrogen, an ingredient of the now famous heavy water. The results of his experiment, if he meets with success, will affect neither lighter-than-air aviation nor mankind directly.

It is simply that science will be better able to study the true nature of the nucleus of every atom, which is a positive core of electricity.

"Many ridiculous things have been said about this business of a cheaper helium for blimps and dirigibles," explained Dr. Mohler yesterday. "They are all so much balderdash. I am trying to find the missing link in this particular phase of analyzing the atom. My missing link is simply an infinitesimal bead of this new helium, and I haven't found it yet.

"Suppose I do find what I'm after. Well, it will help us analyze the atom and some day, if sub-atomic energy is found to be radioactive, it may play some small part in what greater scientists in other fields will do to transform its radium qualities into sulphate and find new cures for cancer."

Dr. Mohler searches weekly for his precious helium.

"But," he added yesterday, "I do not romantically walk the streets at night dreaming of my experiment.

"It is all in the job, you know—all a part of this vastly interesting business of experimenting."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 26.—Clyde Bradshaw, a veteran of the Civil War, lay buried here for 40 years in a potters field.

A member of the board of trustees of Bellevue, the county home for the poor, was walking through the graveyard for paupers at Bellevue recently when he turned over an old tombstone bearing the name of Bradshaw, and initials which led him to believe he was a war veteran. Inquiry to Washington revealed that Bradshaw fought in Company F, Thirteenth Maryland Volunteers, and was honorably discharged September 4, 1864. Bradshaw will be reburied next week at either Arlington or at the National Cemetery at Sharpsburg, Md.

Peace Is in Sight In Quarry Strike

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 26.—With Howard Colvin, of the United States Department of Labor, and J. C. Neely, of the State labor department, here, a series of conferences starting yesterday between the 575 striking employes and the management of Standard Lime & Stone and Kelley Island Lime & Stone Transport Co. had made such progress by today that a strikers' committee will place proposals before a meeting of the workers Sunday.

The quarry workers walked out peaceably Wednesday and Thursday, asking a closed shop, a signed agreement and wage increases.

Vote Is Sought On School Levy In King George

County Action in Taking 10 Per Cent of Funds Is Criticized.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 26.—Claiming that the King George board of supervisors was making the schools pay for their own financial difficulties, Superintendent of Schools T. Benton Gayle yesterday presented to Judge Frederick W. Coleman a petition containing the names of more than 50 requesting that the county call an election to decide whether the school levy should remain at the $1 rate or be reduced 10 per cent as ordered by the board of supervisors.

Strong opposition to the action of the board in taking 10 per cent of the county school funds and adding it to the general county fund, which is administered by the supervisors, was voiced by many King George residents.

The county tax rate is one of the lowest in this section, Mr. Gayle said. The rate for 1934 was $1 for schools and 50 cents for general county expenses.

The action of the board changes the rate to 90 cents for schools and 60 cents for general county expenses.

"The tax rate will remain the same but the schools will receive 10 per cent less money from the county, while the general fund will be enriched at the expense of the 1,500 school children in the county," Mr. Gayle said, adding that the schools were made to pay the price of economic embarrassment on the part of the board of supervisors.

Judge Coleman stated he would consider calling an election to decide the question. The election, if called, must be held during June.

New Silt Storm Darkens Plains; Deaths Mount

Cloud Rolls East, Already at Kansas City; U. S. Aid Asked.

By the Associated Press.

Garden City, April 26.—Out of the Nation's arid dust bowl, passed up by rains which fell on nearly all sides, a new silt storm rolled slowly eastward today.

Red Cross officials reported a death rate increase in the affected belt and attributed this in part to the dust. Erosion workers speeded up a furrow-listing anti-dust program. A request was sent to Washington for a bigger allotment of Government funds.

Suffocating clouds were churned up in western Kansas. Others visited a wide area of Oklahoma. The Texas Panhandle was affected. Iowa reported a light dust which settled rapidly. Eastern Nebraska also had slight discomfort.

The dust moved eastward as far as Kansas City, blanketing the city until midafternoon.

Dust Masks Rushed.

In parts of Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas the dust fell on fields still wet with rains of the day before, just outside the so-called dust belt—southeastern Colorado, northwestern New Mexico, the Texas Panhandle, northwestern Oklahoma and extreme western Kansas.

Red Cross "dust headquarters" at Liberal, Kans., dispatched an order to Topeka for delivery of 10,000 cloth masks before end of the week. They will be the first of thousands to be distributed throughout the 18,000,000 acre five-State dust area.

Soil erosion workers reported nearly 700,000 acres of land have been listed in the drive to halt soil-blowing in the affected Kansas sector. A total of 2,500,000 acres is contemplated. Oklahoma will start its listing program next week. The furrows thus raised cross-wise to prevailing winds are calculated to check movement of the earth particles.

Wire Roosevelt for Cash.

The Cimarron, Kans., Chamber of Commerce sent President Roosevelt a telegram urging an increase from 10 to 40 cents per acre in funds allotted to promote the listing program. Kansas erosion workers said contracts placed have accounted already for virtually all of an allotted $250,000.

At the Liberal Red Cross headquarters, Albert Evans, in charge, announced a conference with health officials of Colorado, Oklahoma and Kansas will be held Monday.

"The death rate from pneumonia [illegible] other respiratory diseases has increased tremendously in the last [illegible] weeks," said Dr. William Dek[illegible], of Washington, national Red [illegible] medical director, "and I am convinced that dust is the primary [illegible]."

The three-day dust storm continued [illegible]ated at Liberal. A new storm [illegible]ned the country for 50 miles [illegible]d Garden City.

[illegible]olorado, excepting only the [illegible]y southeastern corner, looked [illegible] today on its biggest snow in 22 [illegible]rs. John Myers, a rural mail [illegible]rier, was reported missing near [illegible]olorado Springs. The snow also [illegible]y on parts of Wyoming and Nebraska.

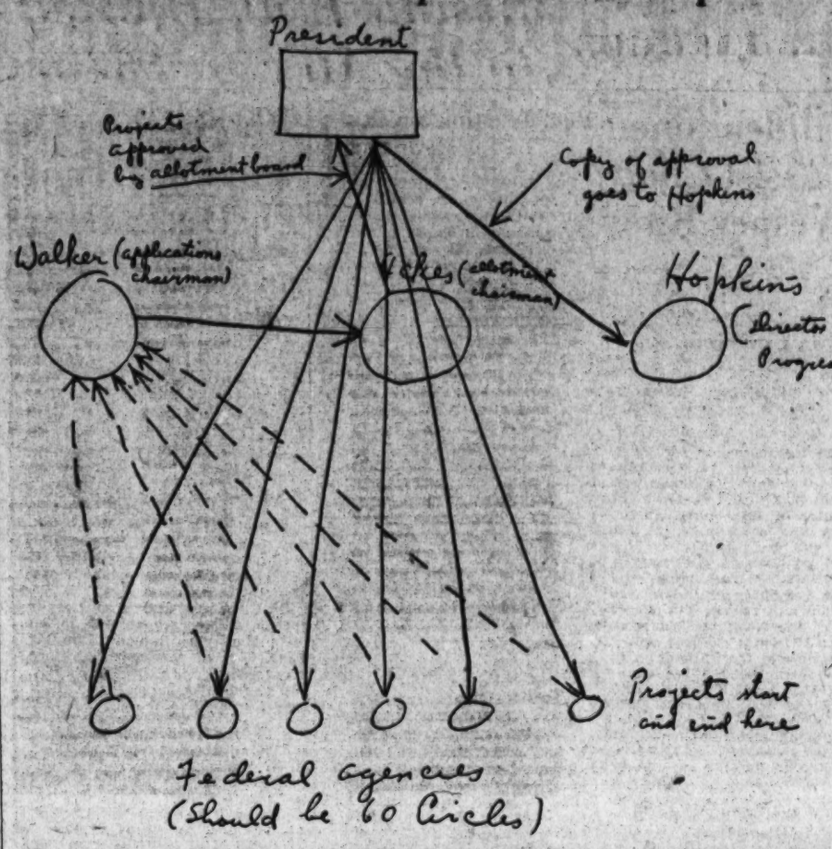
How the Works Set-up Looked to Reporters



President
Projects approved by allotment board
Copy of approval goes to Hopkins
Walker (applications chairman)
Ickes (allotment chairman)
Hopkins (director of Progress)
Projects start and end here
Federal agencies (Should be 10 Circles)

Standing around President Roosevelt's desk yesterday, reporters at his press conference drew charts of the new works relief set-up as the President told them where to put each circle and line. Above is a chart reproduced as it was drawn on copy paper in the President's office.

"Put 60 little circles at the bottom of the sheet," said the President. Then he directed that three large circles should be placed in the middle of the sheet. The little circles represent Government agencies. The large ones show the three individuals who will have charge of the program. The square at the top represents the President.

The dotted lines from each little circle to the Walker circle represent works plans sent from departments to the applications and information division, headed by Frank C. Walker. The heavy arrows show the paths of plans from the applications division to the allotments board, headed by Secretary Ickes, and to the President.

The solid lines show the progress of approved plans back to the originating departments, which will do the work. The heavy line from the "President" square to the Hopkins circle indicates the sending of copies of approved plans to Harry L. Hopkins, who will supervise the work.

Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, will not be one of the "big three." His new division of rural resettlement will rank with other Government agencies in the works program, but the President pointed out that it probably will spend considerably more money than many of the others.

Chart of Progress.

Resuming his role of lecturer on the works program, President Roosevelt instructed reporters at his press conference in drawing a chart representing the progress of works plans from Government agencies through the "big three" and the President, and back to the agencies which will do the work.

As projects are received by the Walker organization, the President explained, they will be filed according to unemployment areas yet to be designated. Large plans will be filed as general projects.

Even projects that already have been examined and approved by the PWA must be referred to the Walker organization. This is made necessary by the fact that the new law and regulations require that a report be made on the number of men to be employed and the length of time the work will take. These facts were not included in the PWA requirements.

The Walker organization will have no authority to reject projects, but it probably will be in a position to determine which ones shall be pushed ahead to consideration by the allotment board. For this reason, Walker will have considerable power in controlling the direction of the program.

Ickes Has Single Vote.

The allotment board can not act except with approval of the President. Secretary Ickes will be chairman of the board and will have only 1 vote out of 23. Except as he can sway the board by his influence and the weight of his experience in works projects, he will have little more power than will the representative of labor, or of business, or of a Government department on the board.

While Walker and Hopkins will act as individuals, Ickes will be only part of a considerable "round table" group. While the group as a whole will be one of the most important in the whole program, Ickes personally will be in a position much less important than those of either Walker or Hopkins. In his former position as head of the PWA he had almost complete authority in selecting projects, making allotments and superintending operations. All of these functions have been taken away from him except insofar as they apply to conducting urban housing operations and handling local projects on a loan or allotment basis.

While Hopkins will be in a position to require States, cities and Government departments to toe the mark in carrying out projects, he will have as his assistant in buying materials Admiral Christian J. Peoples, head of the Treasury procurement division. President Roosevelt explained that materials will be bought by the Government in large quantities, at the lowest possible prices, and then distributed to the various projects as needed. Millions of dollars will thus pass through the hands of Hopkins and Peoples as purchasing agents.

Aims at November Peak.

President Roosevelt indicated that he expected the whole program to go ahead with reasonable speed and that he hoped it would reach a peak by November. He still insisted that projects must be completed within a year. This will impose a heavy task on agencies charged with conducting housing operations, rural electrification and other slow-moving undertakings.

Every agency must report progress at regular intervals and must follow a progress schedule. It will be part of Hopkins' job to see that no agency lags behind. To help in this work the President said a Federal coordinator, operating under Hopkins, will be named in each division. Progress reports also must be made by States, cities and individuals spending works money.

Another task that will be assumed by the progress division will be that of determining the amount of wages to be paid in each of the employment areas.

A further smoothing out of the works plans was being undertaken last night at a White House conference attended by Ickes, Walker, Hopkins, Tugwell, Secretary Morgenthau, Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Committee, and Charles West, former Representative and now the President's contact man at the Capitol.

New York Can't Find Man for $9,000 Job

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—New York City has a $9,000-a-year job open for a director of psychiatry and can't find enough qualified applicants living within the metropolitan area to go ahead with examinations for the post.

The Municipal Civil Service Commission disclosed today that it would readvertise the examinations and throw them open to any qualified psychiatrist in the United States.

Plans Complete, Start of Vast Project Is Speeded.

Prepares Radio Talk.

Meanwhile, the President is putting the finishing touches on his radio address scheduled for 10 p. m. tomorrow.

In his talk, which will be carried by most of the country's radio stations, the President is expected to explain his works program to the Nation as a whole.

Membership in the allotment board was increased by one with the announcement that a representative of the Conference of Mayors would be named. The representative of this group has not been picked. The President explained that he wished the board to be large so that all kinds of proposals, small as well as large, would be given a fair hearing.

It also wa announced that Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., would be a member of the board, representing the Business Advisory Council of the Commerce Department. It previously had been indicated at the White House that Gen. Wood would be given a place in the works program but not as a member of the allotment board.

Meanwhile, preparations continued for taking care of the huge physical task of getting the undertaking started. Furniture was being moved about at the office of the National Economic Council in the Commercial National Bank Building. Employes who will not function as a part of the Applications and Information Division were moved into a building on F street between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets.

Job Rush Continues.

Job hunters continued to besiege every Government department and bureau likely to have a part in the works program. Applications were being taken but little if any hiring was being done.

While the program is designed to put 3,500,000 people now on relief rolls to work, the number will not be constant and others are expected to be taken care of as necessary through direct relief. On the other hand, President Roosevelt is taking precautions to see that the relief program does not absorb so much labor that private enterprise will be handicapped. The United States Employment Service has been instructed to see to it that men are transferred from relief work to private enterprise as the occasion demands. The President also again made it clear that he expects States to take care of their own unemployables.

The manner in which States and municipalities may obtain loans still is uncertain. President Roosevelt said he still held to the theory that such money should not include direct grants and that loans should be for a long period at a low rate of interest. No interest rate has been announced.

France Issues Final Warning To Air Invaders

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Paris, April 26.—The air ministry today issued a "final warning" that French combat squadrons will force down any foreign planes venturing over the forbidden fortified zone on the Franco-German frontier.

The warning was aimed directly at the new German air force. The ministry reported four allegedly illegal flights of German planes across the frontier in recent weeks. The planes flew low over the fortifications.

Police measures to be taken against any future such excursions in the forbidden zone include firing blank antiaircraft shells at the offending plane.

To Protect Secrecy.

If the invader continues, combat planes will force it down.

The government said the measures are necessary to protect the secrecy of France's frontier defense. Fortification still is progressing in the forests of Alsace and Moselle, where army engineers are using Senegalese from Africa and soldiers instead of civilians in an effort to keep the plans secret.

French combat planes, if unable to surround the invading ship, are instructed to pursue the pilot to the frontier, but are specifically instructed not to cross the border into German territory.

The fourth German flight over the forts allegedly occurred yesterday, when a small plane occupied by two men flew low over the surface "strong works" on which troops are working in the vicinity of Laldwisse.

German "Plot" Charged.

Metz dispatches report that the four flights are a part of a general plan by Germany to photograph fortifications.

The new frontier fortifications are complete in many sectors, but auxiliary forts are being constructed as part of the most formidable defenses of the sort ever conceived.

They have been built in the post-war years, a string of tremendous steel and concrete structures above and below ground, rimming France on the German front with a line of defenses believed impregnable even against modern explosives.

The majority of the forts penetrate far into the earth to give shelter to men and materials and are designed to keep France safe from another disastrous invasion.

Text of White House Announcement Defining Hopkins' New Relief Duties

Following is the text of the White House announcement defining the duties of Harry L. Hopkins in the work relief program:

The fourth and final announcement by the President regarding the administrative machinery for the handling of the works relief program provides for setting up a works progress division.

It is obvious that before allotments are made, accurate information must be available in regard to the actual number of employable whose names are on existing relief rolls. As the works relief program is intended to take care primarily of these people the projects must be allocated in proportion to the numbers within a given work area. The progress division will be in charge of these figures and will keep the other divisions informed at all times.

Next, after allotments have been made, it will be the duty of the Progress Division to see that the actual persons to be employed on the separate projects will come from those whose names are on the relief rolls.

It also will be necessary to determine the amounts of security payments in different areas of the country.

The United States Employment Service will have general charge of re-employment of persons on work relief who desire to return to private employment or who are needed in private employment. The Progress Division will co-ordinate this work among the many administrative divisions. Another important function of the Works Progress Division will be the procurement of materials for the projects approved. This will be handled by an office of the Progress Division which will be headed by Rear Admiral C. J. Peoples, now the procurement officer of the Government.

Finally, the progress division will be charged with keeping in touch at all times with all projects and reporting on the progress made. The agents of the division in the field, where there are not sufficient adequate projects in any work relief area, will explore possibilities for additional work and make recommendations thereon.

Mr. Harry L. Hopkins will act as Administrator of the Works Progress Division. He, of course, will continue as Administrator of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, the work of which will, however, diminish in proportion to the number of persons on the relief rolls given employment under the works relief program. As previously stated, the care of unemployables on relief rolls during the same period will revert to States and municipalities.

If the process of making and carrying out allotments sufficient employment in a given area is actually not provided, the existing machinery of the FERA will be continued in order to take up the slack through the creation of local work on very small projects which, because of their size, would not clear through the Works Allotment Board. These projects can be planned and put into operation and completion in a very short space of time. They will be definitely useful.

The general work of the Works Progress Division also will include recommendations designed to keep the actual work of the great majority on projects located as close to the homes of the workers as possible.

Mary McElroy Makes Plea to Governor

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Mary McElroy (right), for whose kidnaping Walter McGee is sentenced to be hanged on May 10, appealed yesterday to Gov. Guy B. Park of Missouri (left), for McGee's life. She was joined in the request by her father, City Manager H. F. McElroy (center), of Kansas City.

Text of Plea Filed by Mary McElroy In Effort to Save Kidnaper's Life

By the United Press.

Hon. Guy B. Park, Governor of Missouri, Jefferson City, Mo.:

Dear Gov. Park:

I am asking your clemency for Walter McGee, who has been sentenced to hang on May 10. This is the first request I have made as the victim in this case. I mention my role of victim only because, technically I believe, I am the only one whose right it is to ask for clemency. So far, publicly at least, I have tried to fill the purely mechanical part of a State's witness.

Walter McGee's trial was primarily important as a test case. The State of Missouri was trying to prove the possibility of giving the death sentence for kidnaping. The sentence was passed by the jury and has been confirmed by the Supreme Court. I believe that the full force of the law has been emphasized and that it is clear that Walter McGee has no legal means of escaping the gallows. I hope and believe that this has served to warn men like him that kidnaping is a serious and dangerous crime to contemplate.

And now, may we consider this a private case? As the victim I am appealing to you; furthermore, I am appealing to you on behalf of the victim as well as that of her captor. I assure you that Walter McGee's sentence has hung as heavily over me as over him. Through punishing a guilty man, his victim will be made to suffer equally. He would even have this advantage—he would not have to think about his execution afterward. In pleading for Walter McGee's life I am pleading for my own peace of mind.

I do not forget the suffering this case has brought in many ways to many other people. Walter McGee's death will not erase or ease that suffering. Rather, I believe the mercy shown him, and the feeling of warmth and hope that any act of mercy brings, will serve as a balm to us all.

Sincerely,

(Signed) MARY McELROY.

2 Girls Qualify For Area Final In Spelling Bee

Dorothy Hughlett Victor, Nancy Walker Second in Fredericksburg.

Dorothy Hughlett, a seventh-grade pupil, has won first place in the spelling bee in the Fredericksburg city school system, and Nancy Walker, eighth grade, placed second. Both girls are 13 years old.

Dorothy will receive a copy of the Wonderbook of Knowledge and Nancy will receive Thorndyke's new Junior Century Dictionary, the prizes offered by The Washington Post for first and second place, respectively, in each county or city division match. Because of its size and the fact that it has a school system of its own, Fredericksburg will send its two best spellers directly into the area final in Washington, May 18. There the spellers will compete for a 12-volume set of the Encyclopaedia Britannica Junior and the honor of representing the entire area in the National Spelling Bee. The school contest in which they were victorious was in charge of Mrs. D. P. Tillar.

LET GREATER AMOCO USERS DO THE TALKING!

WE'VE done a lot of talking about GREATER Amoco-Gas. But after all, it isn't what we say that counts--but what the users say of it. From Maine to Florida and inland, we have heard nothing but enthusiastic praise of GREATER Amoco-Gas. It's the biggest gallon of motor fuel sold. It contains more heat units per gallon than any other gasoline or motor fuel. And it definitely takes less fuel to get more results!

LET A FEW OF THE THOUSANDS DO THE TALKING!

BALTIMORE ENTHUSIASTIC!

"For sixteen years I have been a user of your product which I have found far superior to any other fuel on the market. I have recently tried your GREATER AMOCO-GAS and have found that it even increases the power and economy that I formerly experienced with your product." (Signed) ROBERT L. FOX.

BOSTON ADDS PRAISE!

"We are writing to you particularly because we feel that it is decidedly encouraging to know that you are not in any way lessening the quality of your product but are constantly, according to our experience, improving AMOCO-GAS." (Signed) DWIGHT T. HERSEY.

CUMBERLAND, MD. ATTESTS SUPERIORITY!

"As former users of AMOCO-GAS, I am pleased to vouch for its past performance. As present users of GREATER AMOCO-GAS, we are doubly glad to attest to its present superiority in the field of motor fuels." (Signed) G. F. FRANTZ.

CLEVELAND CLIMBED MOUNTAINS!

"... we filled up with GREATER AMOCO-GAS and as we climbed the mountains we were unable to make the motor knock at any time during the climb." (Signed) J. F. ROBB.

HOMESTEAD, PA. SAYS: "CHEAPEST PER MILE"

"I have tried GREATER AMOCO-GAS and was surprised to find that the old AMOCO-GAS could be improved. I have driven various types of cars for years and many years ago learned that while AMOCO-GAS cost more per gallon, it was the cheapest gasoline per mile that could be purchased. The slight additional cost was more than offset by the additional mileage that I received." (Signed) M. C. JACOBSON.

LAKEWOOD, OHIO ADVISES: "TRY TANKFUL"

"... after personally making a test with both a 1935 Buick and a 1935 Pontiac I can very sincerely recommend to anyone who wishes the most in performance from the present type of high compression motors that they had better try a tank full of GREATER AMOCO-GAS." (Signed) C. A. BAILEY.

ROME, GA. REPORTS MORE MILES!

"To the motorist who has not used GREATER AMOCO-GAS he has something to look forward to, such as quick starting, more mileage, cool motor, less mechanical troubles in every respect." (Signed) H. D. CASEY.

WASHINGTON, D. C.: "REPAID MANY TIMES"

"The results of your GREATER AMOCO-GAS have repaid me in many ways, such as very quick acceleration, tremendous power and its sturdy operating quality." (Signed) E. L. KOEPENICK.

PETERSBURG, VA. SAYS: "OUTSTANDING"

"GREATER AMOCO-GAS is all you claim for it. Unquestionably it is outstanding and something to talk about." (Signed) J. C. MALONE.

DO THIS:

No matter what gas you are using today, you owe it to your pocketbook to try this new GREATER Amoco-Gas. GREATER Amoco-Gas costs us more to produce, but is sold to the motorist on the same basis as the previous Amoco-Gas. Prove to yourself that GREATER Amoco-Gas is the biggest gallon of motor fuel you can buy. Sold from Maine to Florida and inland.

GREATER AMOCO-GAS

AAA AMOCO holds more official world's records than any other gas or motor fuel!

They Have The Facts.

From the nature of its investigation into crime in the District a vigorous and candid report from Representative Randolph's committee has been expected. Unofficial outlines of the conclusions drawn from this extensive testimony indicated that the public would not be disappointed. Accurate appraisal of the report, however, must await its full publication.

Some extraneous issues were drawn into the inquiry, but for the most part it was confined to a fearless and diligent search for the weak points in Washington's system of law enforcement. There were no personal motives behind the committee's efforts. Nor was its probe a fishing expedition by a group trying to create a scandal or to embarrass District officials. On the contrary, it was a sincere endeavor to expose a disgraceful laxity in combatting crime in the National Capital.

In view of this, the committee's recommendations, if not subject to eleventh-hour timidities, are certain to carry weight at the District Building and the White House as well as at the Capitol. The committee might possibly choose to be noncommittal. It could reduce its counsel to the relatively narrow field of legislative changes, thus avoiding any friction or controversy. But its purpose was and is to rid the District of crime, so far as that is possible of achievement. Obviously that can not be accomplished by making a few perfunctory changes in the law.

Real courage is required for the drafting of a report recommending changes in major personnel as well as in organization and procedure. That course would naturally arouse some resentment and opposition. Pressure might be applied to modify its results. But insofar as the committee draws its conclusions from its own findings it need have no apologies to make. Unless an investigation of this kind is used to promote the policies which are shown by the evidence to be advisable, it is a waste of time.

When the final report is made there is little doubt that the group which conducted this searching inquiry will have ample evidence to support its recommendations. The membership has worked conscientiously and fearlessly to uncover the underlying causes of the problem. They are not speaking before they know the facts.

"Trust To The Future."

President Roosevelt's statement that he is opposed to allotting money for projects requiring more than a year for completion evidently does not meet with the unqualified approval of Secretary Ickes. He has a rival suggestion to offer. It is that money should be allotted for the first year's work on construction and then "we could trust to the future for the rest."

President Roosevelt's one-year limit would undoubtedly severely curtail the scope of the public works projects that could be undertaken and might encourage a wasteful outlay of funds. On the other hand, if money is to be spent on undertakings running over a period of years without adequate appropriations in hand to assure completion, one of two evils will result. Either Congress will be virtually coerced into voting money for the purpose of finishing work already begun, or else the sums spent by those who place their trust in the future will be altogether wasted.

Secretary Ickes, not being a wasteful man, evidently believes it is safe to gamble upon the future—in other words, he trusts Congress not to fail him after he has spent all the money at his disposal. His suggestion is one calculated to produce a large amount of public construction. But it is a policy that plays havoc with budgetary estimates.

Assurance To Japan.

A Tokyo newspaper has set Japan agog by publishing charges that the American fleet maneuvers planned for this summer are aimed at the mandated islands of the Pacific. The article also describes the recent transpacific flights as only thinly-disguised commercial ventures bearing a great strategic significance.

Absurd as such deductions must appear to this country, they are not without logic. Japan can easily find reasons for America's interest in the Pacific islands. In the Orient air service, they would be valuable as way-stations, for instance. And the fact that Greece commandeered commercial planes for use as bombers in putting down its recent revolution lends credence to the statement that air strategists have a deep interest in the current Hawaii and Philippine experiments.

Perhaps the best assurance that could be given to Japan would be the declaration of a neutrality policy which would provide our Navy Department with a more definite basis for its planning. At present the Navy has no recourse but to prepare itself for maintaining the traditional "freedom of the seas." And this means operations on a scale which are bound to give the impression of aggressive intent. Until the State Department declares a modern policy of neutrality, the Navy, to fulfill its mandate, must stand for overwhelming strength.

One interesting commentary on the Japanese reaction to the massing of American warships in the Pacific is to be noted. The same newspaper article indicates that Tokyo is still anxious to discuss naval disarmament. It appears, then, that the greater the show of strength on the part of the United States, the greater the demand for disarmament on the part of those who have not always been pacific in their national attitude.

A Shallow Criticism.

Government propaganda was hoisted into the position of a first-rate bugaboo at the annual meeting of the Newspaper Publishers Association in New York. Editors were warned to beware of the "powerful and insidious mechanism" of Government publicity with much the same fervor as some officials in Washington display when they denounce the wicked propagandists who seek to frustrate New Deal policy. To an objective observer it appears that too much propaganda is being used to denounce propaganda.

It is asserted that no less than 53 Federal bureaus are dispensing information on the multifarious activities of the present Administration. Unquestionably a considerable part of their output is more or less deceptive. Alphabetical agencies are not superhuman. Most of them find it impossible to resist the temptation to represent their work in the most favorable light, while ignoring unpleasant facts that encourage criticism. But to compare this weakness for self-praise with the press-muzzling tactics of a Stalin, Mussolini or Goebbels is to distort the truth far more seriously than the Government's publicity bureaus have ever done.

Moreover, this criticism ignores the fact that at least some of the Government's information dispensers maintain an admirably impartial attitude. On the very day that the Department of Agriculture was accused of issuing "propaganda bulletins intended to create a special state of mind," two statements exposing highly undesirable results of the AAA program were broadcast by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

One of these news releases carries the caption, "Korea Plans Cotton Expansion Program," thus adding another name to the long list of territories seeking to take advantage of the cotton curtailment scheme intended to aid domestic farmers. The fact that Secretary Wallace has consistently discounted the danger of foreign producers capturing the American cotton market does not prevent a bureau under his direction from printing evidence to the contrary.

A second report by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics shows that "the recent sharp rise in domestic butter prices has once more attracted imports." The drought and the AAA have sent butter prices to a point where that commodity can be profitably imported from New Zealand in spite of the duty. And how that will help the American dairymen is somewhat difficult to explain.

To the lasting credit of Secretary Wallace and the Department of Agriculture it should be noted that these sorry commentaries upon the scarcity theory of agricultural prosperity have not been hidden from public view. On the contrary, a critical press is furnished gratis with ammunition to use against the department's policies.

Perfunctory Reminder.

Pay day on the Dawes loan passed almost unnoticed by many who would once have expended much indignation upon the failure of Germany to meet her obligations to American holders according to the terms of the agreement. The State Department, of course, was under the necessity of reminding Germany of the invidious treatment accorded to our nationals, but even the aide memoire delivered by Ambassador Dodd to the German foreign office was conspicuous for brevity.

It merely notes the fact that American investors in Dawes bonds are compelled to take payment of the interest due in reichsmarks. These can only be converted into dollars at a considerable discount from the face value of the coupon, whereas owners of the bonds residing in other countries receive payment in full in their respective currencies, under clearing agreements. That is, balances belonging to Germans in the creditor countries are applied to payment of interest due on the bonds instead of being held for account of individuals.

The United States would be unable to resort to compulsory clearing agreements of this sort, even if they seemed desirable, because we sell more to Germany than we buy from her. Hence no excess German balances are available in this country which can be held for covering payment of debt charges. Apart from our helplessness to prevent discrimination, our position as a protestant has been morally weakened by our own action in invalidating the gold clause in debt obligations, regardless of the effect upon foreign owners of United States gold bonds.

Our efforts to meet payments due Panama for rental of the Canal Zone by a tender of depreciated dollars have made it especially difficult to express our official indignation with Germany in the vigorous language that in more moral times would have been fitting to the occasion. Anyhow, whether we protest or remain silent, we know full well that nothing is going to be done at present to correct the situation.

Emphasizing The Obvious.

In the midst of an attack upon the Wagner-Costigan anti-lynching bill, Senator Bailey of North Carolina suddenly diverged from his theme to denounce Father Coughlin in language nearly as intemperate as the oratorical extravagances of the radio priest himself. There is really no reason why the Senator should waste his vituperative powers emphasizing the obvious fact that a priest or a minister who "comes down into the political arena" is a fair target for the shafts of those who think differently. The priest turned politician certainly does not deserve, and probably does not expect to receive, the slightest automatic deference in his secular role.

Father Coughlin has, indeed, emphasized his right as an American citizen to secure a hearing for his views on social and economic problems. It is as an American citizen, not as a priest, that he urges support of his "National Union for Social Justice." The program of that organization merely commits his followers to advocacy of measures sponsored by various Senators and Representatives for inflating the currency, nationalizing the banking system, reducing indebtedness and regulating holding companies to the point of extinction. Father Coughlin adds nothing new to the bewildering variety of panaceas offered to a distraught country, except a blatant emotionalism which has enabled him to secure a hearing for his uncoordinated assaults upon what he calls the "philosophy of plutocracy."

Since Father Coughlin has eschewed all "isms" from "atheistic communism" to "immoral capitalism," he proposes to rely upon the organized strength of his political following to secure passage of "certain salutary pieces of legislation designed for the common good of the majority of the people." Citizens who reserve the right to think for themselves do not need to be told that it is their privilege to criticize any individual who attempts to mold political opinion in accordance with personal views of what is "salutary." In this case, indeed, exercise of the critical faculty is not merely an unquestioned privilege, but also an obvious patriotic duty.

Castle In Spain.

Tourists, planning to go to Spain in the hope of finding the storied land of lace veils and languid senoritas, should rid themselves of such delusions. Efficiency has replaced coquetry and fashionable hats have ousted the traditional comb and mantilla. Everything indicates that from Aragon to Andalusia, the sheltered life has been weighed and found wanting.

But die-hard romantics should not be too discouraged at this outward appearance of emancipation. It is based on a theory as old as the schemes of Eve. A Madrid newspaper woman recently revealed the underlying motive in the transition from shyness to shorthand. She stated that senoritas are becoming stenographers in hopes of marrying the boss! By entering the world of men, they figure that their chances for meeting eligible bachelors will be greater than was possible in the day of the duenna.

Claude Bowers should sound a warning to the senoritas before it is too late. Their idea is on a par with the American girl's romantic belief that nursing is simply a matter of soothing and smoothing. Granted that propinquity is a necessary adjunct to courtship, there is still much to be said for the old hook-and-sinker technique of alluring mystery. And it would be hard to conceive of anything less mysteriously alluring than a slick-faced, bedraggled stenographer after a hard day. For that matter, the boss himself doesn't look any too desirable after eight hours of callers and conferences.

China And Silver.

From the (London) Financial News.

Addressing the shareholders of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China at a regular meeting held March 27 in London, Mr. Arthur Willis, the chairman, said in part:

"Various disturbing factors of an exceptional nature have been in evidence during the past year. Their effect has been to bring about a considerable amount of disquiet in regard to China's currency, to create no little embarrassment to the Chinese Government, and in the last quarter of the year to cause a money stringency which, while injuring the local credit structure, has also interfered with the facilities usually available for the financing of China's foreign trade.

"It is generally agreed, I think, that on the whole a currency based on silver, to which her people have grown accustomed, has suited China admirably. I can only extend to that country my sympathy that as a result of disturbed world conditions the United States have seen fit to formulate an active silver-buying policy which must be detrimental to China's best interests, and which, indirectly at least, is responsible for the currency troubles affecting China today. I understand that her financiers are at the moment actively engaged in working out some practical currency scheme, but the success which I hope will attend their efforts will not be reached without surmounting formidable difficulties. Possibly, without any deviation from America's silver policy, they will look for a currency anchorage outside silver, and we can only await with interest the Government's final proposals for currency reform."

The reprinted drawings will not necessarily represent our own viewpoint, but are selected as reflections of considered opinions on the passing scene. The editors of The Post wish to make full acknowledgment of the courtesy of their contemporaries in granting permission for this procedure.

Wants Arkansas Inquiry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a subscriber of The Post I have watched in vain for some bit of information which would indicate that the Government and the press had taken cognizance of the deplorable conditions existing among the agricultural workers in the South. I refer to the share croppers, who work on land owned by planters and receive for this work a weekly pittance ranging from two to four dollars a family, with which they must buy back whatever of the crop they need, and the necessary commodities from planter-owned stores—operated on so vicious a basis that flour and sugar sacks are priced for sale because it was observed that the share croppers' wives, were using the sacks in which flour and sugar came for clothing.

Dire poverty and painful struggle for existence are not the only evils suffered by this class. They are cheated on every hand by the plantation owners, who are adroit at finding advantageous loopholes in contracts. And at the slightest provocation the share cropper and his family are evicted—a nice word for dumping them on a deserted road with or without their belongings—to live or die of starvation as best they can. Now, because these people have organized a union (the Southern Tenant Farmers Union) to attempt to better the conditions under which they are forced to live, they are being terrorized beyond endurance by planters, riding-bosses, and their dependents, the sheriffs—and aided and abetted by the courts.

If these unfortunate people are not soon removed by wholesale murder or starvation, their lot might still be improved by the government of the people, that is to say, the Federal Government. Mary Conner Myers' report of the share cropper situation in Arkansas must be made public by the AAA, and a senatorial investigation of the terrorism now going on in Arkansas must be started if this horrible blot on the American soil is to be removed, and our citizens are to be allowed to live decent and useful lives. MADGE LORWIN.

Washington, April 23.

Long and Liberalism.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Today it is Huey P. Long; yesterday it was another man, and so on down through the dusk of the ages to the beginning of man's rational existence. In fact, ever since that remote era when a chosen few members of a group of people began to control the wealth of that group, leaving the scraps to the more poorly born, there has been an intellectual man who devoted his life to a redistribution of happiness.

In the modern world the man with spark and driving force is Huey P. Long. He is accompanied by an uncountable number of those men who form the sweeping movement of liberalism; they are those individuals who are pushing the youth of our new world into realms of thinking that were rarely approached by the ancients, at least in daylight, and which are steered around by those in society today who are clever enough to observe that to foster such principles of thought would be like feeding their children with a silver spoon rather than the platinum one they have.

If a man happens to be born in a log cabin, or in some run-down hovel of a house, posterity seems to beckon him; although it is careful to cry out that there are poisons, thorns, assassins and billionaires along the way. Socrates, no doubt, learned to crawl on the dirt floor of his mother's one-room home; and we all know the story of the Virgin Mary and her Child. Lincoln hewed his way out of the woods.

And although some will blush to see the name of the famous Senator placed on the same page with those other great lovers of men who came before him, nevertheless your name or my name might be written there if we had as our life's ideal the love for our fellow men which they held and he reverently holds; provided, also, we set our steps toward that goal where every man would receive an opportunity to enjoy his life and not be forced by uncontrollable circumstances to live in abject misery and mournfully watch the sands of time blown forever away by the cold winds of the day. Escape From Communism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Paradoxical as it sounds, yet it is a fact, that the way to avoid Communism (that is, the notion of leveling all wealth and values regardless of relative merits or qualities) may be found in a booklet issued by Lenin himself in or around 1914. In substance, the State control of prices of raw materials will do the trick—it will achieve what we hoped New Deal administrators would at least try, but didn't do it.

Suppose I am a maker of men's clothes. Have to pay $6 per yard for woolens, while the big clothing manufacturer pays only $3 for the same goods. The Government could have easily regulated the purchasing power, so that the big manufacturer would pay no less, per yard, for the same material than the small business man, or tailor in this instance. This would not only restore and reestablish the small artisan, and contribute to culture (because his methods of working are more nearly American than the factory methods), but also would insure increased wages to the textile workers.

This, we believe, is more consonant with the higher ideals called "Americanism," which apparently Lenin saw, but could not apply for his people's circumstances, since they were too poor to choose for themselves. C. PHILIPS.

Street Cars That Pass.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am hopin that you will publish this so that, perchance, someone in authority at the office of the Capital Transit Co. may read it.

On Wednesday evening, April 17, I attempted to board a street car going to Seventh street wharf. I was standing in the loading zone at 3100 Connecticut avenue between 3:45 and 4 o'clock. The first car passed without making any attempt to stop. The second one, marked Potomac Park, also went by. The third car passed also without stopping, the conductor thumbing to me to catch the next car. This procedure went on for about ten minutes.

The procedure of the motormen and conductors seems to be to keep on schedule, regardless of service to the riding public. For the benefit of anyone interested, the load numbers of at least two of the Seventh Street Wharf Avenue cars were 300 and 320. The number of one of the Potomac Park cars was 11.

The riding public was promised better service under this merged system. But with competition eliminated, it is worse.

T. OWEN MILLER.

Champions Dressing Up.

Happier days apparently are coming for the sellers of sports apparel, if Associated Press dispatches and wirephotos showing what the well-dressed champions are wearing mean anything.

First, San Francisco informs us that the Hon. Max Baer, pugilist extraordinary and screen actor plenipotentiary, has nearly 80 suits of clothes—including three outfits for evening wear. Then is published the photographs from Augusta, Ga., showing Gene Sarazen, golf champ, and Craig Wood, runner-up, nattily attired in late model double-breasted and perhaps stream-lined coats, while our own "Jug" McSpaden comes home with the last word in golf blouses. * * *

And why shouldn't this be? The field of sports offers exceptional opportunities for colorful costumes for gala events. And it's good to see the champions setting styles—even though they may dispute Polonius's tip about clothes—"costly thy habit as thy purse can buy, though not expressed in fancy." If the apparel oft proclaims the man, colorful champions—and amateurs, too—have a right to their sometimes gorgeous costumes. More power to them.

The Post Impressionist

Young Vox Populi

Post Office, Saturday.

IS THE American vocal-chord, and especially the younger American vocal-chord, a lost chord?

Not 10 per cent of our college students have "out-and-out pure voices." As for the use that they make of those voices in the ordinary processes of speech—well, even aside from all questions of grammar and the choice of words, 52 per cent have speech that is "unsatisfactory."

Who says so?

William Norwood Brigance. He says "the experts who test the speech of college freshmen" say so.

Perhaps you'd like to have the term "impure voices" defined.

They are "muffled, guttural, strident, rasping, monopitch, flat, nasal," or voices "in which articulation is so blurred that those listening must continually resort to that monotonous phrase in conversation, 'What did you say?'"

They are "trade-marked by jaw-laziness, lip-lasiness and by a substitution of the nose for the vocal chords."

And then perhaps you'd like a definition of Mr. Brigance?

Dr. Brigance to you.

He is "Professor of Speech" at Wabash College. He was born, 39 years ago, in Mississippi, where speech is pure. He studied in South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa, where it is purer. And he lives in Indiana where, as any Hoosier will tell you, speech is purest.

* * *

Chiefly Dr. Brigance complains that the average American—the average young collegiate American, anyhow—fails in four particulars of speech:

(1) He doesn't use the whole of his mouth;

(2) He doesn't give a double-vowel sound to diphthongs;

(3) He shortens the sounds that ought to be long;

In an article in the Woman's Home Companion, Dr. Brigance tells how to cultivate "satisfactory speech." Says he:

"Sound the front vowels at the front of the mouth, the middle vowels in the middle, and the back ones at the back."

A place for everything, and everything in its place: "The vowel sounds in 'eat,' 'it,' 'way,' 'bed, 'there,' 'hat' and 'my' are all made . . . off the tip of the tongue." Those in "bird," "above" and "but" belong "at the middle of the tongue," while the u of "put" is "also made in the middle, although farther back than the others."

He admits that you'll find the back vowels harder. He cautions you as to diphthongs: you may at first find it rather a job to pronounce "'boy" . . . something like 'baw-i.'" You will have to work before it takes you seven times as long to say "bee" as "bit," and you will require some practice before you can continuously "remember that the throat, tongue, jaws and lips merely shape the sound, whereas "the diaphragm supplies the 'floating power' to create it."

Nevertheless, all this can be done. And, Dr. Brigance sadly implies, there is dire need that it should be.

The Post - Impressionist's own knowledge of college freshmen is not wide enough to warrant him in a generalization about their voices. As the spring waxes, our sleep is indeed disturbed by vocal bits from strolling student-princes out of Georgetown, the American University and whatnot—but these are singing voices, or shouting; not speaking.

About all that we can be sure of in the premises is the fact that the mere presence of any of the "speech-specialists" is enough to muffle, gutteralize, stridentize, rasp, monopitch, flatten and nasalate our own poor voice at one and the same time. And on the whole, this is sufficient to stunt our faith in any of the experts' tests.

We were once so unlucky as to address the undergraduate body of Bryn Mawr. Generally, we are far from timid on the rostrum. We don't even mind—much—if the audience is composed completely of girls. However, on the occasion in question our particular friend among the students, while shepherding us out of the wings, whispered:

"Oh, by the way, you'll see one man in the crowd. But he's only Mr. King, our specialist in enunciation, pronunciation and voice-production."

We weren't a success at Bryn Mawr . . .

Has he listened only to Alex Woollcott? Hasn't he ever heard Lowell Thomas? And has he never, inadvertently, tuned in when Boake Carter was trying to pronounce "entourage?"

Authors In New York Vary In Annual Output

By Ralph E. Renaud.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

HOW much can a man write and still keep from gibbering? Those who live by the typewriter shall die by the keys, but what is one man's output is another's poison. Some writers turn out millions of words a year, and never think twice about it, while others rewrite every page time after time and groan along at a paragraph a day.

Your correspondent has been talking to some authors, and to some just plain, ordinary writers, all of whom manage to make a living out of the printed word. The difference in production is startling. A novelist of some distinction, who has been having hard going lately, and needs every cent he can collect, has just published a new book. His first chapter is a brief one but he told me he rewrote it 30 times before he was content to trust it to the compositor.

On the other hand a writer for the cheap fiction magazines uncovered the African in the woodpulp as far as his business (he does not call it a profession) is concerned. He turns out regularly 3,000 words a day and at the end of the year foots up his verbal ledger to a round million. He never works more than three hours a day, dismisses his work from his mind during the other 21 hours, and manages to get plenty of exercise. He says frankly he would feel himself handicapped if he allowed his mind to be troubled by ideas, and writes automatically like a trance medium. Yet he never fails of publication.

However, his production pales into a thin trickle compared to some of the really prolific writers. Frederick Jackson, one of whose plays, "The Bishop Misbehaves," is a current hit on Broadway, used to be a contract writer for the old Munsey Magazines. He was under bond to deliver 50,000 words of fiction every Saturday at noon. He never slipped once during all the years he was at it, though he does admit working as much as five hours some days. Every word was ground out with four fingers on a cranky old typewriter that frequently jumped its carriage and played other pranks on the ardent young author.

* * * *

NOR has his industry deserted him since he turned playwright. He has tossed off 29 plays in the last 20 years, besides plenty of script for Hollywood. Even now he doesn't feel tired and expects to show his thirtieth play on Broadway next fall. His record probably beats that of the speedy and industrious Owen Davis. It is said that Davis once finished an act and a half of one of his plays while his house guests were finishing a round of golf. Some plays have been done in three days. A current best seller, and not a novel at that, was finished in three weeks.

Some writers learn to dictate successfully. Isaac Marcosson, the well-known publicist of the Saturday Evening Post, dictates all his articles, but revises them carefully after they are transcribed. A few writers can dictate fiction, but something of a man's personality and style is apt to evaporate in this word-of-mouth effort.

Another writer for the Saturday Evening Post whom your correspondent happens to know, does a great many interviews. He often employs relays of stenographers strategically deployed back of his subject. Lately his secretaries have been using a silent shorthand machine, which taps out symbols which any trained operator can transcribe as rapidly as a man can talk. Notes taken in this fashion retain the color and flavor of the speaker with a verity the human ear could never achieve.

This same writer, incidentally, maintains that anyone who writes less than 300,000 words a year is not entitled to a living. His theory is that an author who can't write that amount of good, sound stuff should seek some other form of livelihood. Newspaper columnists usually complain that the effort to produce six columns a week, even at less than 1,000 words each, lowers the quality of their work. Don Marquis says the ideal column outputs three columns a week. Yet the average newspaper rewrite man doesn't think he is overstrained if he produces 1,500 to 2,000 words a day. Some of it may be quality stuff. On the occasion of a great disaster or some other big story, your correspondent has known a rewrite man to turn out more than eight columns in less than four hours. But he needed a drink when he got through—and so did his copyreader.

EARTHQUAKES may kill thousands in Formosa, Stalin may take a ride on his new four-rides-for-penny subway in Moscow, Huey Long may blast his enemies in Washington, but there is only one bit of news on Broadway. Is Mae West married? "No," says Mae. "Yes," says Broadway. "Who's that gennmun I seen you with in Diamond Lil?"

Of course, if it were true, it would produce a revolution in the movie world. Can this creature of captivating curves, Circe-in-chief to the entire masculine sex, actually be a matron? Can those come-hither orbs, shooting their concentrated essence of It, have rested tenderly on a husband? Alas, then where is the glamour?

Wiseheimers along the Main Stem say they remember the gent very well. Unless he is a couple of other fellows, he answers to the name of Wallace, and quite early in his career took Horace Greeley's advice to "Go West, young man, go West." Milwaukee was the place and Mae the person. From Hollywood it looks as though Mae were beginning to recall the dear, dead days and that there really was a person named Wallace mixed up in her career somewhere. But she still denies she middle-aisled it with him. What a terrible thing it is to have fans on your neck, especially when you've got a neck like Mae. Disclosure of a secret marriage would merely be so much publicity for the ordinary actress. It is just so much poison to the Siren of the Screen. Mae West is a name to conjure with. Mrs. Wallace isn't.

AND to think we have only a hundred years to wait for it! Some of us, born yesterday, may even make the first trip, toiling painfully up the gangplank with the aid of a cane, settling comfortably into the oxygen chamber, and waiting for the accelerator to buzz as the great rocket takes off with nose pointing straight to that little crimson planet burning faintly in the sky.

When the chemist's promised day comes—a two-hour working day, at that—we are to have dream pills, interplanetary travel, no colds, no indigestion and very little death. Think of poring over vacation literature like this: "Tours to Mars and Venus—Inter-Galactic, Inc. See the great canals. Stroll in the Red Forest. Feed the Venerian dinosaurs. Rocket jitneys to every point of interest. Courteous guides and interpreters. Fifteen hundred ergs covers all expenses. Get aboard for vacationland in the sky."

Fascinating, to be sure, but it might be even cheaper simply to take a dream pill. That would also guarantee getting home safe.

THEY have a new watchword up in Harlem, where Father Divine's "Heaven" is going stronger than ever. It is "Peace." If a Harlemite wants to get through a crowd he says "Peace" and the way opens for him. If he wants to greet a cop he says "Peace" and the officer grins. "Peace, brother!" "Peace, sister!" From every sidewalk the beautiful old word rises. Father Divine himself passes in his sky-blue Rolls-Royce, lifting a snappy gray Fedora from his bald dome and the crowds murmur, "Peace, he is God." Faithful Mary, large and glittering in irridescent silks, follows in a maroon limousine and the watchers affirm, "Peace, she walks with God." A fanatic bearing a placard "I have no flesh, I am all spirit" marches down the street and everyone makes way for him, crooning "Peace, he has seen God."

The emotional tension is terrific. A new religion has been born and is spreading like wildfire. And meanwhile, the keepers of the peace are worried to death.

* * * *

With "Peace" gripping all Harlem, and anti-war demonstrations running like a flame through our colleges one wonders if there will ever be any more fighting in America.

Surely. One has only to glance at the kids at play. Overwhelmingly the most popular toy among the children this spring is the cap pistol. Every boy has one, and most of the girls. Does this mean future cannon fodder?

Along The Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

Alley-Oop.

WELL, sir, with the same suddenness with which it swept in upon us in March, 1933, the great New Deal circus is now apparently about to pass out. It is amazing. It almost takes our breath. But there is the cast on the stage in that pyramid formation which always comes just before the curtain's drop.

BARGERON.

Dramatic to the end, that's what one must say of it. Here we were, all comfortably situated in our seats, leaning back and prepared for the long pull. The Republicans had begun to quiver, indicating a possible return to life but most of us were set for at least six more years of the show. We thought it was an endless repertoire. The bag of tricks, we thought, had hardly been touched. Then, out of a clear sky, while we are being held spellbound, there is the chorus of brass and the cast all rushes onto the stage and alley-oops.

* * * *

If it isn't the end then it's different from any show we have ever seen and it's unbelievable the Third Economy intends to turn our theater around.

And regardless of what may be the verdict when the curtain has fallen, everybody will have to admit that superb showmanship was shown at the end. Why, it slipped up on us, that's what it did. Looking back one realizes there were three climaxes which merged perfectly into the grand climax. We would have sensed it when the first layer came onto the stage, undoubtedly, had we not been so numbed from watching the show for so long.

But there's no mistaking that tableaux now. We show-goers came to know it years ago. We may as well reach under the seats for our hats and get up to go.

* * * *

As we see it now, we are awed by its stupendousness, too. We had no idea that so many characters, so much property and so many scenic effects were used. But three days ago there trotted onto the stage the first layer of the great pyramid, the 60 governmental agencies. They almost cover the stage. Some critics say there are only 47 agencies there, but Mr. Roosevelt announced there were 60 and we are not ones to deny him a bit of extravagance in such a presentation as this, the one and apparently closing episode of which costs $4,880,000,000. The agencies rub their gladiatorial feet freely in the resin so they can keep a firm base. They slowly rub their moistured hands or hams—they are so big one can't tell which—on handkerchiefs and with arms outstretched revealing muscles an inch thick they look at the audience and wait.

So help me goodness, out dances Frank Walker, called back to take part in the finish. Gosh, it was way up there in the first act when he did his stuff. With but a quick bow to the crowd Frank grabs the wrists of one of the agencies and is swung up high on their shoulders and there he sticks out his free arm to catch and balance Rex Tugwell as he is flipped up.

* * * *

Now comes the advisory council, the public works board, or something of the kind. Alley-oop, chorus the governmental agencies, Frank and Rex, and up goes the board to the top of the pyramid. It's a queer looking thing in this shape, a heavy base and then just Frank and Rex and another heavy crowd on top of them. But the belief is Mr. Roosevelt shaped it this way so it would stand on either end.

By now everybody is asking with bated breath where on earth are Honest Harold Ickes and Harry Hopkins. They were in the show at first and got a lot of applause. And then suddenly out dances Honest Harold as gay as a lark and the whole crowd alley-oops and he is swung clear to the top. Did you ever see the like of it in all your born days? What a structure, what a pageant, what a tableaux and costing only $4,000,000,000. But the end is not yet. There comes Harry at last. He is swung off to the side, a tangent, so to speak. It's hard to tell just now whether he looks good there or not.

On Sunday night, it is understood, Mr. Roosevelt is to take his bow. You see, he is the girl in tights who traipses around and points to the formations and says "oh" and "ah."

Now if it's like all the rest of the shows they will all jump down, do a frenzy of handsprings and leave the stage.

No 'Catholic Angle' In Quest For Truth

Dr. Steck Upholds Editorial Position Of The Post Regarding Mexican Situation.

Instructor in Latin-American History, the Catholic University of America.

THE open letter which the Apostolic Delegate of Mexico addressed to The Post, and which appeared opposite the editorial page in the Easter Sunday edition must have been a more or less discomfiting revelation to many, as it was a source of justifiable satisfaction to those who have all along preferred to approach the church problem in Mexico quietly, dispassionately, and scientifically—the manner in which the present writer and his students at the Catholic University have all this while been approaching it.

Exception was taken in some quarters to an editorial published in The Post on March 25, wherein it was stated that the recent articles by Mr. Williams on the problem as well as the rejoinders to them by Dr. Quintanilla were so one-sided as to prevent impartial readers from formulating definite opinions as to the merits of either cause. Now, after this episode in the conflict is pretty well forgotten, the Apostolic Delegate himself comes forward and tells us that the judgment enunciated in that editorial coincides with his own.

Again, among Catholics, clergy as well as laity, there were those who held that the Williams articles were not "the Catholic view of the situation" in Mexico. For this stand they were regarded by some as uninformed and unsympathetic. Now we hear the Apostolic Delegate conceding in effect that one may quite safely disregard the views of Mr. Williams, since he was writing the articles in no official capacity whatever, but was merely expressing the views of a private citizen.

Is it not a pity this very important circumstance was not made clear at the outset? It would surely have precluded a whole lot of confusion and misunderstanding; and it would certainly have prevented Dr. Quintanilla from saying certain things that were not exactly pleasant, however justified they may have been.

* * * *

TO work effectively and successfully toward a solution of the church problem in Mexico we must approach and handle it scientifically. Nothing is gained and much is lost by making the same mistake that was made during the religious persecutions in Europe three and more centuries ago. Never in future years must it be possible for a Le Maitre to step forth and justly declare that ever since so-and-so American church history "has been a conspiracy against the truth."

Now, as then, this holds for both sides. What we need, and what the Catholic Church is not afraid of, is the scientific approach under the guardianship of sound historical scholarship. This scientific approach connotes sterling honesty in matter of methods and means, strict impartiality in matter of investigation and judgment, clear interpretation and sober enlightenment, abundant presentation of facts and figures that speak for themselves, willingness to admit mistakes where mistakes were made, to make concessions where concessions involve no compromise of principle, to give credit wherever credit is due.

If Mr. Williams had approached the problem from this angle, Dr. Quintanilla would have had no come back. The former's treatment was unscientific, and the latter's retort was, of course, in kind. The one got as far as the other—nowhere.

To go a little clear in the present muddle and to exemplify what was just started. If at the outset of the Mexican church problem, say some 25 years ago, and since then, Catholic writers and speakers had entered the lists armed to the teeth with a thorough knowledge of Mexico's colonial history and fully prepared to demonstrate Mexico's undeniable indebtedness along every line to Catholic Spain and to the Catholic Church; and if in addition they had set about explaining the philosophy that in those days naturally and inevitably lay behind Spain's colonial policy and system—in that case, I believe, the enemies of the church in Mexico would not have had a foot of ground to stand on. They would have looked in vain for a helplessly uniformed people upon whom to foist false propaganda and illegal measures.

* * * *

THE pity of it was—and we might just as well admit it—Catholic historical scholarship in this country and possibly also in Mexico had not prepared the way for the situation that arose, having been deplorably remiss in the study of Latin-American history in general and of Mexican history in particular. It is to the non-Catholic historian and research scholar that high credit is due—and full credit the present writer accords them—for having created by the written and the spoken word a wholesome interest and a wealth of information in the field that Catholic historians had so sadly neglected. The names of these scholars, beginning with Bandelier and Lummis, are well known and their works appreciated by student of Latin-American history.

To cooperate with them along lines of sound scholarship; to supply them with that correct and adequate interpretation of institutions and events which they strive after but which, mostly through no fault of theirs, they sometimes fail to attain; to associate with them in the discovery and presentation of new facts and figures from the wealth of archival materials made available in most cases their efforts; this, the present writer is in a position to say, constitutes the aim and purpose of the department of Latin-American history at the Catholic University in Washington. Our studies and the published fruits of these studies are not going to be "from the Catholic angle," as was ambiguously stated recently; they are going to be from only one angle—sound historical scholarship.

Happily, to judge from the letter of the Aposolic Delegate of Mexico, the attitude we at the Catholic University assumed toward the Mexican Church problem from the beginning is gradually finding its way into other sections of the country. Here is hoping it finds many adherents and spokesmen; for the more it finds of these, the sooner will the problem be solved to the satisfaction of all parties concerned.

General Grant

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

ULYSSES SIMPSON GRANT was born April 27, 1822, at Point Pleasant, Ohio. He died at Mount McGregor, N. Y., July 23, 1885. He was only 63 years old, but he accomplished so much that it seems as if he must have lived over a longer span of time.

We usually think of him as Gen. Grant, not as President Grant; for his greatness as a general is unquestioned, whereas he was not one of our great Presidents.

Like some other soldiers, Grant always hated war; he believed the Mexican War was unjustifiable, and that the Civil War was a punishment of the United States for its sin in beginning the Mexican War. He fought in both, as was his duty as a soldier.

* * * *

It was strange that he was named after the only successful general of the Trojan War, Ulysses; and stranger, in the light of his biography, that he should have been given the initials U. S. When he was at West Point, the cadets called him Uncle Sam and "Sam" for short. For the latter part of the Civil War, his initials in the minds of Northen men stood for unconditional surrender, the phase he used in a letter to a Confederate commander.

Grant never professed to be a literary man; but as in fighting, his method was to keep attacking till the enemy surrendered, so he employed the same direct method in his correspondence and speech.

"No terms other than an unconditional and immediate surrender can be accepted. I propose to move immediately upon your works."

But perhaps his greatest phase, coming at the time it did, was "Let Us Have Peace."

* * * *

His Memoirs show the same direct, unaffected simplicity of style. They were written only by the most heroic effort. He was dying of cancer and knew it; every day in agony and failing strength, he carefully husbanded his resources, so that he finished the autobiography exactly four days before he died.

When I was a little boy, my father took me with him in the summer to Saratoga. Grant was then President and made a formal visit to this summer resort; one day, he gave a reception to the public. Any man, woman or child had the right to join the line and shake the hand of the President. It was a very hot day. Grant wore kid gloves that were soaked in sweat and the sweat rolled down his face and on to his beard. He looked extremely uncomfortable and maintained a fixed expression without a smile. My father, who almost worshipped him, said "God bless you!" I said nothing; but even today I can feel the pressure of the President's hand.

Fate Of Swiss Franc Hinges On Psychology

Socialists Join Peasants In June To Vote On 'New Deal' Depression Bill.

By Andre Vulliet.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

EMBOLDENED by the growing feeling that the "gold bloc" is on the verge of disintegration and encouraged by the recent devaluation of the Belgian currency, the international speculation is now turning its guns against the Swiss franc. Battered by the same wave of depression as caused the "belga" to be pared of 28 per cent of its value, the Swiss are nevertheless confronted with economic conditions all their own. So, the fight they are putting on for the defense of their currency has its own character and its issue is still undetermined.

It seems certain, however, that whether the Swiss franc does or does not hold on, its fate will be influenced by two important factors. One will be the more or less favorable development of the Belgian experiment. The other, of paramount importance for Switzerland, will be the decision its people will take in a popular referendum on June 2 as to whether or not to embark upon a "New Deal."

According to the Swiss constitution, laws can be promulgated or rejected by a popular referendum provided a petition for such a procedure is signed by a sufficient number of people. Banking on the general dissatisfaction, the Socialists and a good many peasants have succeeded in having a "depression bill" footed by 334,699 voters out of about 1,200,000. The bill must come before the Swiss people on June 2 and if it is voted upon favorably, pocket-sized Switzerland, with its 4,200,000 heretofore conservative inhabitants, will find itself launched into the most socialistic, new-dealish experiment in its history.

* * * *

THE "depression bill" project is as follows:

"The following article is added to the Federal Constitution: The Swiss Confederation will take the necessary steps to cope with the depression and its consequences. Such steps will be taken to give every Swiss citizen a sufficient standard of living.

"To this end, the Swiss Confederation will:

(a)—maintain the purchasing power of the people by preventing salaries as well as agricultural and industrial prices from falling;

(b)—protect wages and prices so that labor will receive an adequate income;

(c)—dispense work through a methodical plan and regulate the placement of the unemployed in a rational manner;

(d)—relieve agricultural enterprises and alleviate the burden of their interest charges, so that peasants and farmers can keep their farms;

(g)—make use of the country's financial power to promote exports and to develop tourism;

(h)—regulate financial markets and control capital exports;

(i)—control trusts and industrial unions.

It is also stated in the project that "when necessary, the Swiss government may depart from the principle of commercial and industrial freedom" and that the heavy expenditures incurred by the enactment of the bill will be covered by government borrowings as well as current receipts.

* * * *

SHOULD such a constitutional amendment be adopted, it seems almost certain that its financial side would dangerously unbalance the federal government finances while its socialistic aspect would scare away the foreign capital that has taken refuge in Switzerland. These two factors combined would quickly send the Swiss franc toppling down, in the opinion of financial experts here.

As it is, however, and even though the "depression bill" should be discarded, the Swiss are faced with the difficult task of keeping their currency on its present level. Compared to the "belga," the Swiss franc is in a much stronger technical position, the National Swiss Bank's total liabilities and note circulation being covered by gold in the unusually high proportions of 93 per cent and 120 per cent respectively. Unlike Belgium, Switzerland has not yet gone to the painful limit of deflation and she does not seem ready to do it. A tentative 7½ per cent cut in government employees' wages was rejected by a popular referendum in July, 1933.

Like the Belgians, the Swiss are confronted with a drastic drop in their foreign trade figures, due partly to their high prices and largely to tariff barriers all over the world. This, however, would not be so vital to them as it was to Belgians if they could, as in the past, make up for their trade balance deficit by the activity of their financial institutions (capital movements) and the benefits from their tourist trade. But the high cost of living in Switzerland has told heavily on her tourist trade and her banks are in a critical situation, although not to the same extent as those of Belgium and not for the same reasons.

THROUGH a policy of subsidies, tariff protection and price pegging, the Swiss government has kept costs of production and particularly the cost of living at an exceptionally high level, as shown by the table below:

	Wholesale prices.	Cost of living.
Average 1913-14	100	100
December 1921	178	192
" 1925	157	145
" 1929	129	142
" 1930	117	138
" 1931	103	145
" 1932	99	134
" 1933	91	126
" 1934	89	126
Decrease 1929-1934	36%	30%

Before the war, Switzerland was already a creditor country. But its importance as an international financial center was extensively developed after the war, when large amounts of foreign capital sought shelter in the large Swiss banks. It is reported that, from 1913 to 1930, the latter's total resources increased by 230 per cent, their total deposits alone expanding by 400 per cent. It is now estimated that the foreign capital deposited in Swiss banks or invested in Swiss government bonds amounts to some $800,000,000.

* * * *

WHEN the depression broke out at the end of 1929, the development of the Swiss banking system was not halted and 1930 was a record year for Swiss banks. Their deposits continued to pile up and their lending activities increased.

But this trend was reversed in 1931, when Swiss banks began to have their troubles, due to exchange difficulties and moratoriums in Central Europe. Considering how limited the possibilities for short-term investment were in Switzerland, Swiss banks had of necessity granted credits abroad.

A general estimate of the total frozen Swiss credits abroad is not available, but the amount is known to be very large.

A new aggravation of the banking situation in Switzerland might cause considerable troubles if it caused them to be faced with important withdrawals of funds for foreign account, which, in the long run, might seriously endanger the Swiss currency's future.

The Swiss franc's eventual value, therefore, depends largely upon psychological elements. But these very factors will be greatly determined in the near future by the attitude adopted toward economic questions by the Swiss government and, on June 2, by the Swiss people themselves.

Hymns Are Advised As Depression 'Cure'

Most Pastors Know Nothing of Music, Leader Says.

A great many ministers are backward when it comes to music, the Rev. William Chalmers Covert, D. D., moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, declared recently in New York. He recommended the singing of Christian hymns as a spiritual weapon against economic difficulties, but admitted many clergymen do not know how to use music and hymns in their services.

One of these clergymen told Dr. Covert not long ago he knew only two tunes; "one of them was 'Yankee Doodle' and the other one wasn't."

According to Dr. Covert, every great spiritual movement in history has turned to song as a means of inspiring its followers.

Uniform Opposed For School Girls

Abnormal Interest in Clothes Seen as Result.

The school girl who is put into a uniform is likely to develop repressions which will later result in an abnormal interest in clothes. This is the conviction of Mrs. Robert V. Russell, president of the United Parents Association of New York after observing the 2,000 girl pupils in one of New York's public schools.

The girls wear regulation middy uniforms, black ties and full-length black cotton stockings. It's the black cotton stockings that hurt the most, Mrs. Russell believes. She has learned most of the pupils slip light-colored hose into their brief cases and change into them the minute dismissal bell rings.

Miss Perkins, Mrs. Roosevelt Prove Women Can Be as Forceful Orators as Men

Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, Minister to Denmark, first won acclaim as an eloquent speaker in Lyceum and Chatauqua.

On both sides of the Atlantic American women have proved "the skirt has a place on the rostrum." Fourteen years ago, Lady Nancy Astor (left) took to the stump and won a seat in the House of Commons through the force of her original and clever speeches. Miss Frances Perkins (right), only woman Cabinet member, asks no odds from any man in the field of oratory, and, like Anna Howard Shaw, often has been acclaimed as "the equal of any man" on the platform.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Inaugurate Housing Week

Girl Scouts' "Little House" Scene of Better Homes Celebration.

MRS. ROOSEVELT will officially open "Better Homes in America Week" today at the National Girl Scouts "Little House," 1750 New York avenue northwest, thus leading similar celebrations in Girl Scout houses and in communities all over the United States.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. William Brown Meloney, sponsor of the Better Homes in America movement, will be received by Mrs. George Burnham, national vice president of the Girl Scouts; Mrs. Frederick Brooke, national field chairman; Mrs. Benjamin F. Cheatham, national board member, and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, commissioner of the District of Columbia organization.

The National Girl Scouts Little House was built in 1923 by the General Federation of Women's Clubs. It is a modernized reproduction of the John Howard Payne home at East Hampton, Long Island, and was called the "Home Sweet Home" house. In 1924 it was moved to its present location and the corner stone was laid by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge. In 1925 the Girl Scouts cooked and served the President and Mrs. Coolidge a Vermont turkey dinner. In 1931 President and Mrs. Hoover opened Better Homes Week at the Little House and ere served a 24-cent luncheon by Girl Scouts. In 1933 Mrs. Roosevelt was served a 15-cent luncheon and in 1934 Mrs. Roosevelt opened Better Homes Week by viewing "leisure time activities," demonstrated by Girl Scouts.

The "Little House" has a historic rock and memory garden in the rear; a copper ore rock from the Butte, Mont., Girl Scouts, an old paving stone, once used for ballast on the early sailing ships, is the gift of the New Orleans Girl Scouts. Loisville, Ky., Girl Scouts sent a stone from the foundation of the Mary Todd Lincoln home. The Ohio Girl Scouts presented a Buckeye tree. Thereare two box trees from Gunston Hall, in Virginia; a redwood tree from California, planted by Mrs. Hoover in 1932, a Mary Wallace rose, named for the sister of the Secretary of Agriculture, and many other interesting plants and stones.

The program will be given for the benefit of St. Monica's League. No tickets will be sold, but a silver offering will be taken. During her visit in Washington, Mrs. Turner is the guest of the Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Fletcher.

What TODAY Means

"Taurus."

IF APRIL 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from noon to 2 p. m., from 4 to 6 p. m. and from 9 to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 to 8 a. m., from 2 to 4 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m.

Trifling with the affection of either a friend or relative is apt to be a dangerous pastime, if indulged in. Be careful that a lack of consideration for the time, or feelings of others does not interfere with what will otherwise be harmonious conditions. If you show indications of being sociably inclined on this date, you possibly will be surprised by the amount of pleasure the day will have in store for you.

Be careful of the indiscreet wagging of a friend's tongue, for there is a likelihood that if you repeat some of the things you hear, trouble may be stirred up to the point of becoming a disturbance. Avoid morbid discussions, and stick to agreeable subjects, if you wish to be popular.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those suffering wounds from cupid's dart, will find it will pay to be tactful and to overlook trifles, as well as to make no comment regarding them on this date.

If a woman and April 27 is your birthday, avoid keeping to yourself too much, but make it a point to take an active part in social affairs, if you wish to be happy. If you will develop the habit of taking a liberal viewpoint, on things in general, you may be surprised at the gratifying results. You have a great deal of strength of character, and if you determine to do anything, the possibilities of failure are very remote.

If a man and April 27 is your natal day, it may pay you to keep well posted on current events. Try to analyze every important question, with an open mind, before reaching a conclusion. Avoid being too retiring, if you wish to succeed. It will possibly pay good dividends if you make it a practice to be genial in your daily contact with men and women. Inventing, engineering merchandising, manufacturing, as well as scientific research work, may provide the means through which your success will come.

Rep. Josh Lee Declares Feminine Viewpoint of Importance.

"Logic has replaced lung power on the platform," say those who censure the antiquated type of oratory, with its flowery language and high-flown similes. Women have followed the new trend and helped to establish the modern type of public speaking. Have they, also, helped to retain qualities that are essential to oratory in any age? This is the last of a series on women public speakers.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A FORCEFUL WOMAN orator is just as logical—often more so—than the average man. But women, generally speaking, are not crusaders. As a rule, they don't "feel the call" to express themselves from the platform. But when they do, they have every chance to win acclaim—provided they employ the right methods.

These are conclusions of personable Representative Josh Lee of Oklahoma who is by way of being an authority on public speaking. Head of the public speaking department of the University of Oklahoma for 16 years, author of a widely used text-book on public speaking and one of the most stimulating and eloquent speakers in Congress today, Mr. Lee is a well of information on what it takes "to go over" on the platform.

Discussing women orators yesterday in his office, he weighed their shortcomings against their accomplishments and concluded the odds were in favor of any woman "who really has something to say; who retains her femininity on the platform; and who doesn't try to approach her subject as a man probably would."

The Feminine Viewpoint.

It is not a matter of mental capacity, Mr. Lee explained. In his opinion, women are as intelligent as men. "But in most cases they look at a subject from a different point of view, and when they obviously aren't trying to imitate men, they are—in many cases—able speakers."

Mr. Lee further feels that "sincerity is the bedrock of oratory;" that almost anyone can sway an audience if he is convinced he has a message—if he, in other words, feels the call to express his convictions publicly, can present his ideas logically, and makes use of the emotional as well as the intellectual type of appeal.

"Women are certainly capable of this," said Mr. Lee, "as is evidenced by the number of good women speakers today."

Miss Perkins Shows How.

In this connection he mentioned that Miss Frances Perkins "took Oklahoma by storm" with her platform appearances. (According to reports from all parts of the country, Miss Perkins, with her forceful, sparkling speeches, has taken many States "by storm.")

Mr. Lee also cited Mrs. Roosevelt as an excellent example of a woman who retains her femininity on the platform, adopts a conversational method that establishes a contact between herself and her audience, and impresses her listeners as much with her warmth as with her ideas.

While he admits modern public speaking is aimed at the intellect rather than the emotions, Mr. Lee is convinced a forceful speech must have a fervent appeal. "The old motto relative to oratory, 'Convince the mind and move the will,' is as pertinent today as it ever was," he said. "We haven't progressed so far from old-fashioned oratory as some may think. The best speakers today appeal both to the mind and the heart. Despite all this talk about modern public speaking and the way it differs from the old type, you would find that if William Jennings Bryan were living today, he would still be recognized as an outstanding speaker."

Another person who is convinced it would be hard to improve on "The Great Commoner's" brand of oratory is his younger daughter, Mrs. Grace Bryan Hargreaves, who is now living in Washington. Following in her father's footsteps, Mrs. Hargreaves has made a name for herself as a speaker on the West Coast, and is now planning a series of lectures to be given throughout the country.

At the age of 11, she was accompanying her father on Chautauqua tours, appearing on the platform with him on numerous occasions. "When I was 13, he began training me in politics and public speaking," she said yesterday. "Since then I have never lost interest in either, even though much of my time in subsequent years was given over to my home and my children. Now, I am going to begin where I left off."

In planning and delivering her speeches, Mrs. Hargreaves uses the same methods employed by her father, who rose to fame as "The Boy Orator of The Platte."

"Father's speeches were divided into three parts," she explained. "The first was the introduction, in which he talked slowly and probably told a story or two while he gauged his listeners to discover what would interest them. The second part consisted of the lecture itself. In that he presented his facts and convictions, meanwhile increasing his tempo. The last was the climax, when he voiced an emotional appeal and left some outstanding inspirational idea with his audience, It was this, of course, that so vividly impressed his listeners."

Lady Astor a Leader.

The record of William Jennings Bryan's older daughter, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, is already widely known. Making a name for herself in lyceum and chautauqua, she later won a place in Congress and eventually became Minister to Denmark.

Another American who was swept into the international spotlight by force of her oratorical ability is Lady Nancy Astor, first woman to sit in the English House of Commons, who staged a campaign and won the support of voters by her clever and original addresses.

Also in this list should be mentioned Miss Doris Stevens, one of the youngest feminist leaders in the international field. Two years ago in Montevideo, she negotiated the adoption, by the Seventh International Conference of American States, of the Equal National and Equal Civil and Political Rights treaties. In her present position as chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, Miss Stevens is a much sought-after public speaker.

The list of all women who have won national and international fame (and, in some cases, notoriety) through their oratorical ability is unbelievably long and ranges all the way from Secretary Frances Perkins (at the head of the list) to the evangelistic actress, Aimee McPherson (further on down the line). With so many women establishing themselves as forceful platform speakers, it would seem women have gone a long way since the days of Angelina Grimke and Abby Kelley Foster—and that the Portias have, indeed, come into their own.

Princetonians Slow To Choose Careers

262 of 486 Seniors Are Still Undecided.

More than one-half of the seniors at Princeton University have not yet decided what they will do after leaving the campus in June, a recent survey of the graduating class shows.

Of the 486 men who answered the questionnaire sent out by the director of student employment, 224 had decided upon their vocation, while 262 had not made up their minds. The largest group out of the 224 consists of 141 seniors who plan to do graduate study. Sixty-two will enroll in law classes, 27 will study medicine, 1 will study for the ministry. The rest of the 141 men will be divided among graduate courses in business, architecture and engineering.

Advertising attracts the largest number of students planning to start their careers soon after graduation. Fifty-nine men intend to enter it. Commercial banking runs a close second, 56 having selected it. Forty-nine plan to teach. Forty-two have chosen general business.

Islanders Discard White Man's Ways

Calico mother hubbards and denim trousers are being discarded by the natives of Puka Puka, a South Sea Island, in favor of their native costumes which consist of grass skirt and loin cloth. In fact, the natives are reverting to their former style of living in every way possible, the Pan-Pacific Press Bureau reports.

The departure of white settlers during the depression is responsible for this unusual condition. Thus, while other South Sea Islands are rapidly acquiring the white man's mode of living, the inhabitants of Puka Puka are returning to their native diet and are burning coconut oil instead of the kerosene introduced by the white settlers.

Clock Runs 19 Years Untended.

A clock has run for 19 years without winding in Orebo, Sweden, thus attracting many tourists to the peaceful little town, the United Press reports. The timepiece is run by variations in air pressure and will stop only when its parts wear out, the inventor claims.

Women Extol Business Field As Opportunity

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 14.—There is still plenty of opportunity for women in the business world, a survey by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs has disclosed.

"The game is worth the candle," was the general reply of 5,000 club women, in business for themselves, to questionnaires sent out on business operations up to January 1, 1935.

Only 6 per cent of women in all fields of endeavor covered by the survey expressed the belief that their sex had been a handicap in business.

While the survey found that women were engaged in everything from undertaking establishments and taxi services to laundries, some of the more favorable fields of business were found to be knitting shops, speciality shops, gift shops, beauty shops, real estate and restaurants.

The knitting shop, where yarns are sold and knitting is taught, appeared to offer great possibilities. It was estimated there were 10,000 of these small shops over the country, with an estimated retail business of $200,000 in 1934, although the shops are only a recent innovation.

Amateur Acting Aids Voice

Women Can Cure 'Rasps' in Little Theaters, Leader Asserts.

EVERYBODY, from college deans to visiting foreigners, has had something to say recently about the rasping sound of feminine voices in this country. These amateur critics declare American women enunciate sloppily, speak too fast, pitch their voices in a high, unpleasant key and screech.

Some of the college deans have become so worked up over the matter they have established new courses of voice training in their schools. But while these courses will probably help the college girl they are beyond reach of the woman who has left her college days behind her or of the girl who must forego so-called higher education.

But persons outside the classroom can get a free and comprehensive course in voice training All they need do is join a Little Theater group, according to Mrs. Isobel White, wife of Commander S. Rowland White, U. S. Navy.

Experienced in Dramatics.

Mrs. White, a Little Theater actress of several years' experience, is convinced the best way to improve one's speaking voice is to work under a good stage director. And most Little Theaters today have directors who know as much about diction and inflection as they do about exits and entrances, she has found.

Mrs. White's own voice was beautifully deep and resonant as she discussed acting, speaking, poise and kindred subjects yesterday at her home, 4101 Ingomar street. She began her amateur theatrical career in Santa Barbara, which is near her native city, Montecito, Calif. Since coming to Washington a year and a half ago she has been with the Drama Guild.

"The girl who works with a Little Theater group," she said, "is bound to learn to use her voice to the best advantage. The director will see to that. Each player is coached in speaking plainly. Most beginners go to the extreme of mouthing their words at first, but gradually they settle down into enunciating clearly and into pitching their voices in the right key."

Voices Musical, She Says.

Feminine voices in America are probably as musical as those in other countries, Mrs. White believes. American women simply don't know how to make use of what they have. Or perhaps they can't be bothered. But a stage director will see that they do bother about speaking correctly, and the amateur actress thus learns through experience.

Moreover, the girl who goes into Little Theater work is almost certain to acquire a good deal of poise, according to Mrs. White.

"Poise," she said, "is something that can not be taught. But every appearance before an audience is a challenge to a woman to walk well, to hold herself proudly, to be as graceful as possible. And after making a lot of public appearances these things come to be a part of her, so that she practices them offstage as well as on."

Joining a Little Theater group is a simple procedure, according to Mrs. White. She has never found any snobbishness in the organizations with which she has worked; says the file clerk is given an even break with the debutante.

When the Drama Guild players open Monday night at the Wardman Park Theater in "The Crime at Blossom's," Mrs. White will appear in the leading role. In addition to acting, she has written several things for the theater.

While attending University of California she wrote a one-act play, "Tango Tales," which was presented at the junior prom program. A producer in the audience was so impressed with it he bought it, cast it with professionals, sent it out over the Orpheum circuit for five seasons.

D.C. Artist Plans N. Y. Show

Mrs. Ray Hall to Place Oriental Paintings on Display.

MRS. RAY OVID HALL, well-known Washington artist and wife of the former attache at Athens and Constantinople, will leave today to establish a studio at 18 East Sixty-fifth street, New York, where she will hold an exhibition of Oriental paintings May 25. A number of members of the diplomatic set will attend the reception opening her show.

Mrs. Hall will enter New York's art circles under the aegis of E. Christine Lumbston, of Carnegie Hall, considered by many critics America's outstanding woman portrait painter. Some of her work hangs in the Corcoran Gallery here, and it was with her that Mrs. Hall first studied.

Mrs. Hall has completed about 30 canvasses for her New York debut, most of them depicting landscapes and mosques in Constantinople, whose rich colorings she had an opportunity of studying at first-hand for several years while her husband was identified with the diplomatic service.

It was Mrs. Hall's coloring—the soft, delicate hues and misty atmospheres of the Turner School—that won the attention of Lucien Powell, the famous Washington artist with whom she studied from her return to America in 1927 until his death three or fours years later. She also absorbed some of the genius of Halvador Bagge, the Swede, in Athens, and Stefano Bachilovitz in Italy, where she devoted herself to both painting and sculpture.

In the postwar rehabilitation of Turkey during the early twenties, Mrs. Hall helped cement the bond of friendship between that country and the United States and won the esteem of diplomats and social leaders of the Oriental nation by founding a school for the free instruction of Turkish children.

She is planning to go abroad next fall to renew her acquaintanceships, especially in the Near East, and to continue her art studies.

By Mary Haworth.

AFTER A WEEK'S spirited balloting in the controversy over who is to blame—the shopper or the salesgirl—in the event of personality conflict across the counter, the public seems inclined to hold the salesgirl to blame. To tip the scales still further in that direction, we have today a letter from a saleswoman who crisply calls her confreres to account.

• • • •

And yet, as if to bring the whole discussion to a gracious conclusion, we have yet another letter, averring neither saleswoman nor shopper is so much to blame as that particular form of social organization known as democracy. I am prepared neither to endorse nor to deny this theory, but I am happy to offer it for what it may be worth. M. H.

Done Better in England?

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: The great feminine shopping public seems to have been thoroughly aroused by "Jaundiced's" broadside. There isn't much to add to the discussion. But it seems to me—though I, too, have suffered unhappy moments at the hands of indifferent and disdainful saleswomen—that the responsibility for setting the tone of the encounter rests with the customer as the person of "so-called social standing."

• • • •

The thing to remember in this democratic country is that each feels herself to be a person rather than a representative of a class, or a store fixture, or anything like that. As you suggest, only complete impersonality can really solve the problem, and that is extremely difficult to achieve in a society like ours, where there are no permanent lines of demarcation between the classes.

• • • •

In England, I understand, they do these things better. Long tradition has established laws of precedence, etc., that every one takes for granted and that make all sorts of personal contact much easier. On the basis of unalterable distinction, members of different "classes" can achieve an impersonal pleasantness, even friendliness, in their relationsships. That grand story (and picture), "Ruggles of Red Gap" illustrates this very point.

As for myself, I find that the opening: "I wonder if you can help me find what I want," works wonders. Sincerely,

SHOPPER-UNDER-PROTEST.

Key to Selling.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: As a salesgirl in a local department store I would like to address a few remarks to "Jaundiced." Her character seems obvious enough to be judged by an outsider. I am a college graduate and, no other openings being available, I applied for and obtained a position as salesgirl in what I have always considered the finest store in this city.

• • • •

I had no ambition to go into department store work, especially selling, but I decided that as long as I was doing that I might as well make the most of my opportunity. I have found that selling is the finest experience for living that a person could ask for.

• • • •

Of course, there are ill-mannered and inconsiderate customers. But for every disagreeable one there are two agreeable ones—even better than agreeable, considerate! After all, no matter what your job, people are human and it takes all kinds to make a world. That goes for salesgirls, too, as any shopper will testify. For there is a key to selling that "Jaundiced" apparently hasn't learned.

• • • •

It isn't the customer who makes the sale. It's the salesperson. When your ill-mannered, inconsiderate shopper approaches, that, needless to say, is your misfortune. But it needn't make you jaundiced. I am a person with a quick temper, but knowing it would endanger my job to lose control, I've learned to hold my tongue, and if I get nothing else out of selling, I'm still well off. Furthermore, I've found if you can learn to regard such customers as "experiences" they're much easier to put up with.

• • • •

On the other hand, when you have a customer who is a joy to serve that's your good fortune. People like that are infectious and nine times out of ten I find myself carrying that joy to my next customer.

• • • •

But it isn't these people who make the salesgirl. It's the ones whose approach is a neutral approach. And it's up to the salesgirl to make the exchange agreeable or disagreeable by her own attitude. Because it is scarcely a coincidence that the salesgirls who are habitually inconsiderate and disagreeable complain the most about the same characteristics in their customers. Invariably, to hear them tell it, they're the ones who always "get the worst customers to fool with."

• • • •

My advice to "Jaundiced" is just this: If you're going to sell, make your customers enjoy buying. And remember, if you're considerate and agreeable, pleasant customers will come back to you; if you're unpleasant, they'll avoid you. Make the most of your good customers and forget the others and I'll guarantee your jaundice will soon be cured.

I've written this in a hurry and it may not make much sense, but thank you, Miss Haworth, for letting me have my say.

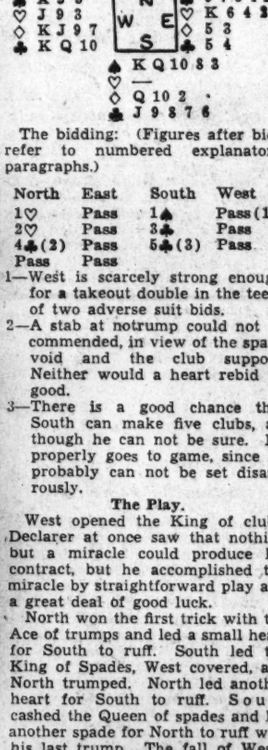
Distribution Makes the Contract.

The bidding of misfits and freaks usually involves some guesswork. The following deal was no exception. South found three trump honors against him and unfortunately they were all in the one hand. Besides that, he was missing two Kings, an Ace and a couple of Jacks. But because of a void suit in the closed hand and another in the dummy, he fulfilled his contract.

North Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1♡	Pass	1♠	Pass (1)
2♡	Pass	3♠	Pass
4♣ (2)	Pass	5♣ (3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—West is scarcely strong enough for a takeout double in the teeth of two adverse suit bids.

2—A stab at notrump could not be commended, in view of the spade void and the club support. Neither would a heart rebid be good.

3—There is a good chance that South can make five clubs, although he can not be sure. He properly goes to game, since he probably can not be set disastrously.

The Play.

West opened the King of clubs. Declarer at once saw that nothing but a miracle could produce his contract, but he accomplished the miracle by straightforward play and a great deal of good luck.

North won the first trick with the Ace of trumps and led a small heart for South to ruff. South led the King of Spades, West covered, and North trumped. North led another heart for South to ruff. South cashed the Queen of spades and led another spade for North to ruff with his last trump. The fall of West's Jack established the spade ten in declarer's hand.

North led a third heart for South to ruff. South led his last trump, West winning. Owing to fortuitous circumstances, West was left with nothing but diamonds and the long trump, and was thus compelled to lead away from his King of diamonds and could win only the trump trick. West's proud hand yielded two tricks in clubs and nothing else.

Increase in Depression Mental Ills Disproved

Contrary to current opinion, mental diseases did not increase greatly during depression years. This fact has been substantiated by a study recently completed by the National Committee for Mental Hygiene in collaboration with the American Psychiatric Association.

In some cases where increases were reported it was found they were due to more hospital facilities, and a very few to exhaustion of family resources.

Something New In Typewriters Displayed Here

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT WOULD BE an interesting exhibit if someone would collect all the models of typewriters that have appeared and line them up side by side. What a vast difference between the first awkward machine and the streamline affairs of today! In fact, there's a surprising difference between last year's models and this year's.

You may see for yourself what steps have been taken in modernizing the little office blessing if you view the display of brand-new typewriters in a local store. In this are featured portables, sleeker, slimmer, faster than ever before.

These new machines even have touch control. The tension and keys are adjusted to the individual touch by means of a little lever. If you are butter-fingered and need extremely easy keys, then all you do is adjust the lever. If on the other hand you prefer a less pliant touch—adjust the lever again.

If you want to see just how complete, compact, and streamlined one little machine can be, just take a look at these!

Lavender Sachets.

Back in 1749, a young Englishman started a company which made perfumes and sachets. Now, 186 years later, this company is still going, and is famous the world over for its fragrant preparations.

You'll be enchanted with the delicately scented little lavender sachets, made from the compressed leaves themselves. A downtown store, which features these, is selling them for 25 cents each.

Moth Proof Rug Bags.

Many housewives are in the midst of spring cleaning. There's a general hullabaloo about washing windows, storing winter clothes, polishing floors and making the house spic and span for the season. One big bother is the rug problem. Where to put them where they're safe? How to keep them from being the banquet board of the moth clan?

A downtown store comes to the fore with some rug bags which are amply large for two 7 by 12 rugs. These handy little bags are permanently moth and vermin proof, also dust and damp proof. They cost only $1.59.

Fitted Rodelac Bags.

The rodelac bags in a local store are so completely fitted they might be called toilet cases. Each one contains a large mirror, a compact, lipstick, and two compartments for change, lipstick, keys and what-nots.

An especially attractive feature is the large, rodelac chain handle, which makes them easy to carry and particularly smart.

These bags are available in red, green, light and navy blue, and tortoise shell. If you prefer to outfit your own, you may also buy them unfitted.

Musical Powder Boxes.

One little customer about 12 years old stood by the store counter. He was fascinated. His eyes were large with amazement. Slowly he reached up on the counter and touched one of the powder boxes there but quickly drew back and looked around him. Assured that no one was watching he reached out again and this time he lifted the top from the box. As a merry little melody came from the mechanism concealed inside, a salesgirl hurriedly approached. From another direction came the young man's father.

As the girl behind the counter replaced the top, the father took the child's reluctant hand. As he drew him down the aisle the boy cast backward glances at the fascinating musical powder boxes. Suddenly a thought struck him. "I couldn't have one, could I, father?" he asked. His father shook his head. "Then couldn't you please buy one for me to give Mamma on Mother's Day?"

Can you guess what happened? The father and child returned, and some Washington mother is going to be surprised with a musical powder box on May 12!

She's a very lucky woman, too, for the boxes are most attractive. They are made from a material which looks like cloisonne—but doesn't cost as much. There are several different styles from which to choose, all in different colors.

Peasant Table Covers.

Many shoppers have succumbed to the Russian woodenware displayed in a downtown store. And indeed, the bright, red, gold and black lacquered cookie jars, trays and candy boxes so moderately priced, are hard to resist.

Now, to accompany these, the same store is showing some Russian peasant table covers in myriads of colors and fantastic patterns. They have a small fringe around the edge which gives them a lovely finish.

Percale Print Pinafores.

Percale print pinafores are flattering little things for the hostess to keep within easy reach. She can quickly don one when it's cocktail-shaking time, and she'll find one indispensable to slip over her dress when she's preparing that after theater snack.

These attractive little pinafores come in six or seven different styles. They sell for 35 cents each, or three for $1. You'll find them in the budget corner of a downtown store.

Community Health Depends On Alert Officials and Citizens

Public Cooperation Necessary to Remove Disease-Spreading Factors, Cutter Says; Dirty Alleys, Streets Invite Rats, Flies.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE health of a community depends upon several factors, not the least of which is the intelligent cooperation of all the citizens with the health authorities. A clean water supply is extremely important, as is an adequate plan of sewage disposal. Civilization advances only as the people possess health. Probably the greatest single factor in the decline of the Roman empire was malaria. Had the Romans known about the mosquito as the spreading agent in malaria they would have drained their swamps, oiled all stagnant pools and eradicated the disease.

In a healthful city with clean streets and alleys free from accumulations of rubbish, garbage and filth, individuals may continue life with a high factor of safety and with a minimum risk of epidemic disease. Garbage must be properly disposed of. There must be collecting machinery so carefully supervised that spilled bits of garbage shall not invite rats and vermin. Rats thrive on kitchen waste and they will nearly always be found where there is shelter and food of the roughest variety.

Lesson of Spanish War Cited.

We do not know all about the mode of spread of poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis) and epidemic encephalitis (so-called sleeping sickness). It may be that flies and other insects, rodents and stray animals of all sorts are factors. Every spot where flies can breed must be exterminated. The terrible lessons of the Spanish-American War in the spread of typhoid fever need not be repeated.

Food for sale must be protected and every housewife should be guaranteed by strict enforcement of food sale regulations that no article for human consumption will be sold unless it is wholesome and is handled in a cleanly and sanitary manner.

Do not criticize your neighbor's back yard unless your own is clean. Do not blame your neighbor's children for the spread of scarlet fever, measles, or diphtheria unless you have used every possible precaution in preventing the dissemination of any disease from within your own family. Do not pass judgment on your neighbor for having smallpox in the family unless you yourself have been vaccinated against this preventable disease.

Dust Accumulates in Winter.

Soap and water when combined make a powerful cleansing agent. So does paint. During the winter months, while our houses have been closed and windows only partially opened, dust has accumulated on walls, ceilings, floors, and all articles of furniture. We often wonder why nearly everyone in the household has colds that appear every little while and hang on for so long. A careful inspection of the home may supply the reason. Floors, walls, and furniture may be loaded with dust, the chief factor in the spread of disease germs. The breathing of dust particles irritates the mucous membrane of the air passages. This is followed by inflammation and infection and the first thing we know a cold develops that may mean days in bed with loss of time and efficiency. Infected dust comes largely from traffic along streets and alleys.

Someone has estimated that the annual bill for the disposal of household waste in the United States is more than $300,000,000. One may well doubt if this sum is sufficient for the accomplishment of so important a task. The cost of street cleaning alone in American cities, as set forth in a fairly recent report, shows wide variations ranging from 65 cents to $4.46 per capita. It is granted that it is impossible to secure accurate comparable data from all communities, so the figures may mean little. We can all aid in the development of high standards of civic cleanliness and perhaps—in this matter—take lessons from some European cities.

The carrying out of health measures should be businesslike and efficient, but anything that has to do with the health of all the people must not be tarred with the brush of politics.

Prize Awarded To Mrs. Millar For Pie Recipe

Maryland Woman's Lemon Meringue Uses Eggs Only as Thickener.

By Dorothea Duncan.

FIRST PRIZE, $3 in The Post's recipe contest this week goes to Mrs. John W. Millar, Pisgah, Md., for her old-fashioned lemon meringue pie—the kind that uses only eggs for thickening. Second prize, $2, is awarded to Mrs. Evelyn Aline, 809 Sixth street southwest, and third prize, $1, to Miss Clara H. Jarvis, 134 G street southeast.

Honorable mention is awarded Miss Dorothy Nalley, 371 Charles street, Winchester, Va.; Mrs. Mabel G. Downing, 718 C street northeast; Mrs. Sarah K. Harrison, 600 Twentieth street northwest, and Miss Rose A. York, 1704 Kilbourne place northwest. All the recipes are different versions of the lemon meringue pie. Mrs. Millar's recipe:

Lemon Meringue Pie.

4 eggs
1¼ cups sugar
1½ lemons, juice and rind
No thickening.

It's the technique in mixing that counts. Beat the egg yolks until very light and add two-thirds cup of sugar. Have the double boiler hot and cook this mixture in it, stirring well, until it begins to harden or thicken on the sides of the boiler. Add the lemon juice and grated rind and let it cook until thick, stirring it almost constantly (about half an hour). Then stir in two of the egg whites, stiffly beaten and combined with one-third cup sugar. Pour at once into a baked pie shell (made preferably on the bottom of an inverted pie-plate so that it will be deeper).

Cover with a meringue made of the other two stiffly beaten egg whites mixed with four tablespoons of sugar, and brown in a slow oven 10 to 12 minutes.

Lemon Meringue Pie.

2 cups milk
1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons cornstarch
2 eggs
5 tablespoons lemon juice
Grated lemon and rind
1 tablespoon butter

Scald milk. Mix sugar, salt and cornstarch and pour milk on gradually. Cook in double boiler for 15 minutes, stirring constantly until thickened. Beat egg yolks and add to this mixture. Cook three minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from stove, add lemon juice, rind from one lemon and butter. Cool slightly and pour into crust and cover with meringue made from egg whites. Brown in moderate oven.

Meringue.

2 egg whites
4 tablespoons pulverized sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
Pinch salt

Add salt to egg whites and beat until stiff. Add sugar and vanilla gradually and continue beating until stiff enough to stand up when beater is lifted. Spread over pie and brown as directed.

Mother's Lemon Meringue Pie.

6 graham crackers
6 slices zwieback
4 tablespoons melted butter

Roll crackers and zwieback fine and combine with melted butter. Line a 9-inch pie tin with cracker mixture, using a tablespoon to pat in place.

1 can (1 1-3 cups) sweetened condensed milk
1-3 cup lemon juice
4 tablespoons sugar
Grated rind of ½ lemon
Dash of salt
4 eggs separated

Beat whites of eggs with salt until stiff. Add sugar while beating whites. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Add milk, lemon juice and grated rind to egg yolks, mix together well. Fold one-third of egg whites into mixture and turn into the lined pie tin. Top with remaining meringue and bake in a slow oven for 15 minutes or until browned. Let stand at least three hours in the ice box.

Lemon Sunny Silver Pie.

4 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ tablespoon gelatin
½ tablespoon lemon juice
1-3 cup boiling water
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon lemon extract

Separate eggs and beat yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Continue beating and gradually add one-half cup granulated sugar. Cook this mixture in a double boiler until creamy (about five minutes), stirring constantly. Remove from flame. Soak gelatin in lemon juice for 5 minutes and then dissolve in boiling water. Add gelatin and salt to egg yolk mixture and cool. Beat egg whites until frothy. Add one-half cup granulated sugar gradually and continue beating until egg whites have assumed a meringue consistency. Add lemon extract and fold this mixture into the egg yolk mixture. Pour into baked pastry shell and let stand for four hours before serving. This pie is delicious when topped with whipped cream, flavored with sugar and lemon extract.

Pennsylvania Lemon Pie.

Take a slice of bread, cut at least one inch thick and remove the crust. Soften bread in one cup of cold milk, to this add the juice of one lemon and two egg yolks, well beaten, and mixed with one cup of sugar. While the original recipe does not call for it, we would suggest that the grated rind of the lemon be used also, being very careful to get only the yellow rind and not a bit of the white. Cook this mixture in a double boiler until thick and then stir in one tablespoon of butter and a pinch of salt. Pour into a baked pastry shell and bake in a moderate oven. Use the egg whites for the meringue.

Dorothea Duncan will be glad to help you with your culinary problems. Write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

OBJECT— Not MATRIMONY

By LILLIAN BARKER.

ALL a-tremble, Katrina stood in front of Melvin's door dreading, not daring, to knock. As she tried to muster sufficient courage to rap, the door opened. Out of it stepped Grace Eldridge.

"My dear," the nurse exclaimed, closing the door cautiously, "how odd you are here! I was just on the verge of telephoning you."

Miss Eldridge, waiting for two approaching nurses to pass, lowered her voice and said:

While in no serious condition, yet, he has worked himself up into a frightfully nervous state and is again running a temperature. All over that air-mail special delivery letter he received about 3 hours ago. At least I believe it was the letter, but very stubbornly he refused to admit that to me. I had a feeling, however, he might confess it to you. That was why I was about to phone. Now scoot on in there, Katrina."

Mel Was Surprised.

Trina "scooted." Rather, she tiptoed in and found Melvin with the letter in his hand. At sight of her he dropped it and stuttered out the greeting: "You've surprised—me. I wasn't expecting you, love—loveliness."

"I know. I know you weren't." Sitting on the edge of a chair which she'd moved close to the bed, Katrina said: "Tell me, Mel, have you had bad news? Did something in that letter you were just reading upset you? I want to help you."

"That goes without saying. But the situation, my situation, is a little awkward. Very awkward, in fact. Still, I have neither the right nor the desire to conceal anything from you. Now this," he picked up the communication, one of many, many pages, penned in bold, girlish, vertical writing on Santa Fe Railroad stationery, "is from Sheila Cunningham——"

"From Sheila, your one-time fiancee who deserted you for Hollywood and a career in pictures!"

Would Arrive Soon.

"Only," Mel's smile was whimsically sad," the career hasn't materialized and the picture-lured girl, now admittedly a flop in the talkies, is headed East.

Sheila coming to see Melvin on the very day set for his "hospital wedding" to her, Katrina Harman! And Taz, right then, that very minute, was waiting outside for her to execute that delicate "feeling out" mission!

"Aren't you excited? Aren't you thrilled?" Trina asked.

"Too excited. Perplexedly and, in a way, distressedly so. For," scowling, "the kid wants us to pick up where we left off when she broke our engagement. Evidently Sheila has no inkling that you and I have all arrangements made for a wedding here in this very room tomorrow.

"And now she wants to marry you," guessed Katrina, her heart hopefully pounding.

"Your conjecture is right. But, naturally, sorry as I shall be to hurt and disappoint her, I'll have to tell the remorseful-would-have-been movie star of our plans. Trina. Read the letter for yourself, though. Then you'll appreciate my position."

"I already appreciate it," with the most understanding of smiles.

Just the same Katrina read the letter. The protestations of undiminished affection, expressions of regret, compunction, pleas for forgiveness, iterated and reiterated desire for a renewal of the broken-off engagement, all so characteristically "Sheila-ish."

After moments of reflection, Thina, tears of gratitude welling in her eyes, smoothed the "worry" wrinkles from Mel's forehead and said:

Could Stand Anything.

"This amazing turn of events is beyond our comprehension, of course. Here, at the urging of Taz Bronson, who's just returned to New York, I'd come to you on the most delicate mission imaginable. And how did I find you? In a veritable panic over Sheila's letter. But now—shall I explain my surprise visit? You're going to get the shock of your life, I'm preparing you. Think you can stand it?"

"After the shock I've had I'm sure I can stand anything."

Melvin raised himself up on one elbow and listened to Katrina's detailed statement of her "mission," to the account of the matrimonial "frame-up" in Rome and anticipated her with the surmise:

"Now he, Tazewell, wants to marry you, doesn't he?"

"Yes, Taz, too, has 'come to his senses,' so he said." And eyes dancing. "Doesn't this, the way things are working out, I mean, make you believe in—in—well, what shall I call it, Destiny? For you adore Sheila Cunningham, Mel. I'd felt it all along, and the day following your operation I was more than confirmed in my belief."

Called for Her.

"How so?" Melvin propped himself up a little higher.

"Because in your delirium you kept calling for her, for your 'darling Sheila.'"

"Really? I wasn't aware of that, naturally, but no one can control his delirious utterances, can he?"

On their way home, in breathless, staccato sentences, she described all that had just occurred at the hospital.

And back in the Lombardi living room, after due rejoicing on both sides, she remembered to ask about the certified check she'd sent to Italy in payment of the $625 "I. O. U."

"I got it," Tazewell replied, taking both "I. O. U." and the check, which he'd never had "any notion of cashing," from his pocket and tearing them up, "the very day I sailed."

"That's that," he said with a scoring laugh, "and now you're $625 to the good. Why don't you buy a wedding dress with the money? I'll give you time out to consider the suggestion."

The "time out," several fleeting moments, all turned to Taz's own caressing account, allowed Trina no chance to answer his question.

"Well, have you decided to . . . to follow my suggestion?"

"Maybe not. Even so, I'll have to turn it down. You see, I already have a gorgeous wedding gown. One," toying with the buttons on his coat sleeve, "I'd thought I would never, never wear."

"A wedding gown already made! That's what I call a break! And when are you going to wear it, sweetheart?" asked the one-time-conscientious-objector-to-matrimony. "Tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow."

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Does the consumer get his money's worth? Are the products he buys actually what they are represented to be? The consumers' committee of the National Advisory Council thinks not, and is going on the air once a week to tell the public about it.

The committee thinks the consumer is public dunce number one—the despair of honest merchants, honest money lenders, and honest doctors—and the prey of all the rest. So, through radio talks, the committee will attempt to lighten the consumer's darkness, to help him know what he is buying, to look for grades and labels, to avoid the panaceas of quack money doctors, to squander less of his substance on wars, and to get more satisfaction per dollar spent.

The first talk is on WJSV next Tuesday at 9:45 p. m. The speaker will be announced in this column.

WJSV's big program today is one that is giving the studio a swelled head, a puffed-up chest and more power to Art Godfrey. His Gazette, in its entirety will troup over to the stage of the Fox, and there perform for the benefit of the movie goers.

Chief attraction is Gertrude Neisen, now playing at that theater. Art's "regulars"—Helen Elly, Helen (de luxe) Stewart and Joe Krahling will be on hand.

This—at 9:30 p. m. Tuesday night.

Very nice breakfast yesterday morning at WRC. Between bacon, eggs, toast and coffee, Gordon Hittenmark had cute things to say about bacon, eggs, toast and coffee. Not to mention marmalade.

Hittenmark will probably spend the rest of the week sorting records. Jim McGrath has offered to help, but "Your Timekeeper" ungratefully remarked that Jim would be a very great help if he'd leave the records alone.

"Let's Pretend" presents an original dramatization by 11-year-old Pat Ryan, who selected her cast and directed the production. This is on WJSV, 10:30 a. m. Pat has been acting on these programs since she was six, and has made several adaptations.

High-spots:

Al Jolson presents an array of celebrities on WRC 9:30 tonight. They are Babe Ruth, John Barrymore and Polly Moran, each of whom will perform appropriately, with dramatization and current diamond doings.

A new series of Radio City parties starts tonight, 9:30, WRC. Guests of the evening are the Victor Light Opera Company's cast, who offer selections from "Blossom Time," "Maytime," "My Maryland," and "The Desert Song."

On WJSV, at 12, the Peabody High School A Capella Choir, of Pittsburgh, will be heard under the direction of Florence L. Suite.

The Penn Relays are broadcast, WJSV, 5 p. m., and on WMAL at 3.

Speeches:

Gov. Floyd B. Olson, of Minnesota, speaks at a meeting of the National Farmers Holiday Association. This is heard on WMAL, 2:30 p. m.

Gov. James M. Curley, of Massachusetts, is heard on the Jeffersonian dinner in New York. WMAL, 10:30 p. m.

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair and Senator Tom Connally speak on "The Consumers' Stake in World Trade." WMAL, 7:15 p. m.

Mrs. Roosevelt is heard on the National Parks program. WMAL, 4:15 p. m.

Dr. Sidney E. Goldstein, of New York, Representative Ernest Lundeen and Benjamin C. Marsh discuss "Referendum on a Profitless War," "Social Security Leglislation in Congress," and "What the People Are Getting from Congress," respectively. On WJSV, 1:30 p. m.

Edward Pearce Souder, 45, 1633 Wisconsin avenue northwest, plays musical saw, "When It's Lamp Lighting Time in the Valley." . . . Angelo Maggi, 34, 1234 Thirty-sixth street northwest, sings and plays guitar, "When I Grow Too Old to Dream." . . . Robert William Lockridge, 25, 92 Luttrell avenue, Hyattsville, Md., sings, "Can't You Hear Me Calling, Caroline." . . . Clare Conway, 28, 1701 Twentieth street northwest, plays piano, "Serenade of Love." . . . Edna and Jane Lawrence, 18 and 18, 45 Parker avenue, Cherydale, Va., sing "Isle of Capri." . . . W. H. Heath, 66, 37 South Beach street, Clarendon, Va., play violin and guitar, "Old Pine Tree."

M. Janice Hale, who won audience vote two weeks ago, will also be on program.

John Laurence won audience vote of last week. He sang, "Wanting You."

Girl Injured by Auto.

Struck by an automobile near her home, 5-year-old Eloise Boley, of 747 Sixth street northwest, was reported in an undetermined condition at Providence Hospital last night. The girl suffered severe lacerations to her head and face. The driver was not held.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

TESTIFYING before the House sub-committee hearing on the Sirovich bill, Maj. Sidney Morgan, Tariff Commission, suggested yesterday that if the bill is enacted, a common date for the effectiveness of employe classification schedule proposed be so chosen that all the classification changes be made at the same time.

BAKER.

Representative William I. Sirovich, of New York, chairman of the sub-committee and author of the bill, said this suggestion was very helpful.

Maj. Morgan also raised the point that statutory salaries, not affected by the new classification, might be thrown out of line with the schedules, but it was pointed out that the bill is so drawn that no salary would be reduced. The possibility that the Civil Service Appeals Boards set up throughout the country might render conflicting decisions was explained by Representative Sirovich, who said that all decisions would be reported to the Civil Service Commission and that records would be kept there.

The witness also suggested there might be some complications in having a representative of an employes' union hearing certain confidential testimony as a member of an appeals board, since some such testimony ought properly to go only to Government officials. To this, Representative Sirovich replied that the union member would be a Government official during his term of office.

Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, the first witness yesterday, cited several objections to the Sirovich bill, the first, Representative Sirovich said, that he has heard in some three months. Col. Charles I. Stengle, representing the American Federation of Government Employes, called in rebuttal, took up these objections, pointing out in particular that Mrs. Worrell's fears that joint and survivorship annuities would deplete the retirement fund were unfounded, since the total value of the annuity would be the same, whether it were drawn by one person or by more than one.

The Sirovich hearing probably will close today with an all-day session, at which William Roberts, people's counsel; Maj. K. J. Owen, Federal Housing Administration, and other witnesses will be heard.

Sinful Charges Reiterated.

Supporting the fight made by E. Claude Babcock, president, American Federation of Government Employes, for repeal of Section 213 (marriage clause) of the economy act, the following message was received yesterday at A. F. G. E. headquarters:

"Government Workers Council in executive session tonight voted thanks and appreciation to you for your efforts for the repeal of Section 213. We deeply regret the unpleasant publicity to which you have been subjected for the past two days and want you to know that we stand back of you 100 per cent."

U. S. Racquet Wielder.

Two of George Washington University's leading tennis players, Pierre Howard (F), assistant clerk of the Civil Service Committee of the House of Representatives, and Teddy Pierce (P), Foreign Service Administration, State, suffered their first reversals of the season yesterday at Columbia Country Club, when G. W. U. defeated Johns Hopkins, 6 to 3. Howard is ranked No. 1 on the team, while Pierce plays No. 2 and is captain.

Until yesterday Pierce had won 11 successive matches in intercollegiate competition in his three seasons as a member of the team. He lost his first match at Johns Hopkins in 1933. Since then he has won every match. Although not playing a hard-driving game, he is steady on the court and a shrewd competitive player. Max Farrington, G. W. U. coach, credits much of Pierce's success to his unusual ability in quickly finding his opponents' weaknesses.

A native of Falls Church, Va., Pierce is a graduate of Western High School and is active in other sports as well as tennis. He has been a member of his division's basket ball and softball teams at the State Department for several years.

Formerly a student of Emory University, in Georgia, his native State, Howard played his first tennis in the South's prep school tournaments. He entered George Washington last year and is playing his first season on the team. Last fall he was the winner of the university intramural tennis title.

Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, has accepted an invitation to address the Arkansas Democratic Women's Clubs at their annual convention in Little Rock May 10.

THREE REASONS
That Account for the Popularity of Our Frying Chickens

1. Barred Rock Fryers

Considered one of the finest breeds for table purposes. Large fleshy chickens with pleasingly flavored meat. They are fowl that command a premium in some markets.

2. Raised Especially for Table Use

Scientifically fed and raised under ideal conditions. Every phase of production is directed toward producing a tender, sweet meat. They are raised on some of the largest poultry farms in Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

3. Freshly Killed in Washington

A good chicken improperly killed and dressed may be the difference between a good meal and a disappointment. That's why so much attention is paid to the killing and dressing. This is done only a short time before they are delivered to our markets.

Judge Urges New System OfProbation

Cairns, Treasury Officer, Addresses Session in Williamsburg.

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., April 26.—"We need to rally all our forces to work together for a planned system of criminal justice," Judge Joseph N. Ulman, of Baltimore, urged this afternoon in an address before the law section of the Virginia Social Science Association in session here.

"The task that confronts us calls for the solution of many problems upon which mere training in the law sheds little light," the Baltimore jurist declared in discussing "The Rationalization of Criminal Law."

"The physician must help, and the psychologist; every social science must render its contribution," Judge Ulman explained. "Lawyers can contribute much, their influence will be important in conserving the valuable parts of our traditional legal heritage."

"But lawyers must be willing to throw overboard many of their preconceptions and prejudices, to accept new ideas, as well as to give from their store of practical experience, if the results are to justify the effort."

In the main Judge Ulman's address was a compelling plea for strengthening the probation system in order to reclaim lawbreakers susceptible of reformation. He made it clear that he did not regard probation, however, as a panacea, saying it was inappropriate in many cases and might be abused.

America is a lawless nation of long standing, the speaker said, but emphasized the small ratio of spectacular crimes to the number of persons hailed into court for infringement of one of the Nation's innumerable laws.

He criticized personnel and operation of police departments of many cities and reminded his listeners that a good probation system could not be obtained at a "bargain price."

Judge Ulman was preceded on the program by Huntington Cairns, of the U. S. Treasury Department, who voiced the opinion that "a science of law must be founded on an adequate theory of human society and the construction of that theory is in part a task within the domain of the legal theorist.

"Today, legal study does not exhibit the characteristics of a social science; it is a technology. By its emphasis upon technological ideals it is overlooking a set of problems which must be solved before we can ever have a fruitful theory of law or a sound applied legal science."

Law is subject to incessant change, Cairns asserted, and in turn itself exercises a determining influence upon most or all of the major patterns of society.

Geoffrey May, of the Richmond Family Service Society, served as chairman of the law section, and Floyd N. House of the University of Virginia led a discussion following the Cairns address.

At the first sesion this morning of the Science Association, which is holding its ninth annual meeting today and tomorrow, Prof. George T. Starnes, University of Virginia economist, approved the Federal Administration's unemployment insurance phase of its social security program and belabored "reactionaries" who have sought to delay action on the measure by Congress.

The Administration's proposal, the professor said, offers a choice "between the haphazard character-destroying American dole and the systematic organization of relief."

The major objective of an unemployment plan, he concluded, should be to "take care of cyclical unemployment by building up reserves" rather than to "take care of short-run unemployment during good times." He held that finances for the plan should be contributed entirely by the employer.

Speaking on the same program, William R. Shands, head of the Virginia Legislative reference bureau, presented estimates that the cost to the Commonwealth of old-age "pensions" would approximate $2,434,462 a year if the minimum age be fixed at 65 and $1,389,658 if the minimum were 70.

Dern Protests Plans to Junk W., B. & A. Line

Road Affords Only Outlet for Ft. Meade, P.U.C. Is Informed.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Md., April 26.—Secretary of War George H. Dern today protested to the Maryland public service commission the proposed abandonment of service by the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Electric Railway.

The Cabinet official wrote the commission that the railway afforded the only passenger outlet from Fort George G. Meade, near the Naval Academy junction, except for troop movements. The fort's population ranges from 2,000 in winter to 5,000 in the summer.

During the first nine months of the current fiscal year, Dern stated, the railway handled 455 carload and part carload shipments, aggregating 7,500 tons, to the fort. A bus line operating between the fort and the Naval Academy junction, where bus connection is made with the railway, carried 112,698 passengers since last July 1.

Earlier in the day, a petition carrying 911 names was filed with the commission in protest to the proposed abandonment. It came from persons living in communities along the railway's right of way, and was one of many similar petitions already presented.

Steward Assails Job-Grabbers Of New Deal

Leader of U. S. Employes Sees Civil Service Being Undermined.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 26.—Washington has become "a job factory" run by "self-anointed prophets" and "haloed with an unparalleled effusion of pressagentry," Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, said today.

Steward, speaking to the Baltimore League of Women Voters, envisioned the New Deal as flooding Washington with "obscure zoology professors" and "unimportant merchants" and installing them in positions they know little about.

Such a "haphazard method of staffing and stuffing" the New Deal agencies, he charged, is undermining the Civil Service. Contending that the Civil Service system is at a lower level today than it has been since 1883, when the first Civil Service law was enacted, Stewart added:

"The President has done nothing to maintain Civil Service standards but deliver smiling, bland, front-page pronouncements that mean nothing in the final analysis. They are meant to reassure the people, but Congress continues to exercise an appetite for spoils that has never been exceeded in our history."

Steward said that every appointment that is made beyond the bounds of Civil Service requirements should be "investigated thoroughly." Otherwise, he predicted, the system, "which is now being chipped away brick by brick, will be so abused that it will require years to reconstruct it."

Peery Sees U. S. Lesson At Unveiling

Bishop Freeman Joins in Dedication of Cross at Cape.

By the Associated Press.

Cape Henry, Va., April 26.—From the lesson taught by the first English settlers in America in overcoming hardship and economic adversity, Gov. Peery and Bishop James E. Freeman, of Washington, said today the descendants of these pioneers should find strength and courage to keep the Nation "great and strong."

Speaking in the shoday of a granite cross unveiled here in token of the settlers' victory over the waves on their trip from England, their dedication of the new-found land to Christianity and their successful struggle to keep alive the Nation born in adversity, they said the achievement of the colonists constitutes a twentieth centry challenge.

Bishop Freeman dedicated the cross, Gov. Peery spoke briefly and Bishop Arthur C. Thompson of the Southern Virginia diocese conducted the memorial service.

"It is inspiring," said Gov. Peery, "in this hour of darkness and uncertainty to stand on the spot where the first citizens of the United States landed after their long and perilous voyage across the seas, with hardship and danger behind them and danger before them. As they conquered and built up the greatest Nation on earth, we, their descendants, should have the strength and courage to keep that Nation great and strong."

"It is of little worth," said Bishop Freeman, "that we observe with patriotic zeal these recurring anniversaries or record in imperishable bronze and granite the sacrifices, the heroism and the virtues of the early adventurers unless with selfless ardor we are prepared to maintain their high standards and preserve to our children and children's children the fair heritage they have transmitted to our keeping."

Peery Will Address Callands Meeting

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 26.—Gov. Peery will leave the capital tomorrow for a trip into southwest Virginia. He will make two speeches.

The first address will be made at Callands at 3 p. m., when a new school, costing $75,000, will be dedicated. Representative T. G. Burch, Attorney General A. P. Staples and State Superintendent of Public Instruction Sidney B. Hall are expected to be present.

At 8 p. m. the Governor will discuss "Social Security" before the State convention of Tau Kappa Alpha, forensic fraternity, at Randolph-Macon Women's College, Lynchburg.

Radio to Dramatize War History of V.M.I.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lexington, April 26.—The Civil War history of the Virginia Military Institute will be dramatized over a network of 24 radio stations at 4 p. m. Sunday.

Sponsors of the program are celebrating the third anniversary of the air feature by devoting it to V. M. I. history. It will serve as a preface to the re-enactment of the Battle of Chancellorsville, in which the cadets are to take part on May 2.

Major Gen. Lee Will Be Guest At Battle Fete

Quantico Commander Will See Re-enactment of Chancellorsville.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 26.—Announcement was made today by the National Battlefield Park Association, in charge of the program here May 2 commemorating the Battle of Chancellorsville, that Maj. Gen. Harry Lee, commanding the Eastern base of the United States Marine Corps at Quantico, Va., will be a guest of honor of the association and will witness the maneuvers and sham battle from the grandstand. Many other high ranking officers of the Marines are expected, besides those in charge of Marine Troops reenacting spisodes on same ground over which armies of the North and South fought 72 years ago.

The Fifth Regiment, United States Marine Troops reenacting episodes eral forces in the sham battle, will occupy the identical trenches used by General Hooker's Army of the Potomac when attacked and routed by Gen. Stonewall Jackson's Corps. This Marine unit formed a part of the Fourth Brigade, sent to France soon after the United States entered the World War. It fought at Chateau Thierry, Belleau Wood, Soissons, St. Mihiel, Champaigne and the Meuse-Argonne.

Jackson Taught at V. M. I.

The Marines will have as their opponents the cadet corps of the Virginia Military Institute, which will impersonate Gen. Jackson's troops. Gen. Jackson's corps on May 2, 1863, executed the flank march across the front of Gen. Hooker's larger Northern army, attacking the exposed right wing and routing almost a third of the Federal force. The plan of attack worked out by Gen. Robert E. Lee and Gen. Jackson at their last meeting during the night of May 1, ranks as one of the ablest achievements in the history of military tactics.

Gen. Jackson, who lost his life at Chancellorsville, was an obscure professor at V. M. I. at the outbreak of the Civil War, and on joining the Confederate forces as a major he was followed by cadets who were his pupils. This is the only instance in our history where a school cadet corps took part in actual warfare as a unit.

It was at the Chancellor House that Gen. Hooker established his headquarters before the battle. Sitting on the porch on the eventful day of May 2, 1863, Hooker unaware of Jackson's flank attack, had reported to Washington that Gen. Lee's Confederates were retreating toward Richmond. A staff officer came to advise Hooker of the collapse of his right wing and the subsequent confusion among Northern forces compelled Hooker to order a retreat.

Price to Be Grand Marshal.

While the Marines are under the command of Col. C. F. B. Price, this noted officer will act at grand marshal of the battle movements. As assistant grand marshal, Col. Price will have Maj. Leroy P. Hunt. Maj. Hunt's grandfather fought at the Battle of Chancellorsville and the major still has in his possession letters written from the field by his grandparent.

Actual command of the Fifth Regiment during the sham battle will be in the hands of Lieut. Col. Oliver Floyd, commander of the First Battalian United States Marines. The regiment will consist of 600 men in addition to eight pieces of artillery. The supply officer will be Capt. Delmer Byfield.

Mayor of Danville Is 92 Today And Willing to Run Once More

Veteran Executive Proud of Town's $30,000 Balance in Bank.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., April 26.—Mayor Harry Wooding, said to be the oldest American executive in point of service, will enter his ninety-second year tomorrow and at the end of August he will have rounded out 43 consecutive years as the "head man" of city government.

He plans to spend tomorrow as he has other birthdays—at his desk at City Hall in the morning; at home during the afternoon and evening for a family reunion and, perhaps, a quiet game of set-back with neighbors.

The mayor has no illusions as to his age and feels that the time has come to husband his strength, but he intends to be a candidate to succeed himself in the next election.

"I feel as well as I have for the past 40 years," he said today, "but I am a very old man and if re-election means going through a hard campaign, I am afraid I shall have to withdraw. If the people want me I am willing to serve as long as my physical resources permit it."

Capt. Wooding fought through the four years of the Civil War.

The most marked change that has come over the procession of generations he has witnessed is the broadening outlook toward religion and more liberal interpretation of biblical precepts, he says.

The mayor shows no outward sign of frailty unless it be that his voice is not quite as strong. He still keeps in close contact with all branches of the city government and takes pride in the fact that Danville has met all interest on its bonds, met issues falling due and has $30,000 in the bank.

There will be flowers on his desk tomorrow.

Bank Laws Take Effect On June 1

Setting Up Affiliates to Be Prohibited in Maryland.

State Institutions Will Be Allowed Direct Loan Privilege.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 27.—Several laws affecting Maryland's banks will become effective June 1, among them one which prohibits State banking institutions from setting up affiliates or closely allied organizations except for reorganization purposes.

Even then the companies must obtain premission of the State bank commissioner. The bill is not retroactive and so does not affect existing affiliates.

Another law will permit State banking institutions to participate in direct loans to industry on the same basis as national banks. This is now denied them in Maryland.

Examination Fees Increased.

The charge to banks for examination fees will increase beginning on that date. At present there is a minimum charge of $25 and a graduated scale for the balance of the charges. The new law raises the minimum to $35 and provides an additional fee of three cents per thousand dollars of assets after a deduction of $25,000 of assets.

This will provide an additional income of approximately $25,000 annually to the State. The bank commissioner is authorized by the law to use not more than $25,000 between June 1 this year and September 30, 1937, to care for salary increases and additionel personnel in his department.

Salaries Raised.

Two salaries, those of the commissioner and the deputy commissioner, were increased by laws becoming effective June 1. That of the former, now $9,010 annually, is raised to $10,000, and that of the deputy commissioner is raised from $5,950 to $7,500 a year.

A banking board, serving in an advisory capacity to the bank commissioner and meeting on call from him, will be set up under another law. John J. Ghinger, State bank commissioner, said this is "a most important measure."

The group, an unsalaried body, will be appointed by the Governor from a list of nine persons, three names each to be submitted by the Baltimore Clearing House Association, the Association of Mutual Savings Banks of Baltimore, and the Maryland Bankers Association. The State comptroller will act as an ex-officio member.

Nice Bans Visitors To Study Legislation.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 26. — Because of the pressure of business affairs, Gov. Harry W. Nice said today that it will be at least two more weeks before he is able to dispose of the several hundred bills enacted by the recent session of the General Assembly.

The Governor will deny himself to all callers until he has completed a study of legislative enactments. The Govenor had a stream of callers today. A delegation of political and personal friends urged the appointment of State Senator Ridgely P. Melvin (Democrat), of Annapolis, to the post of associate judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Nicholas H. Green, and another group appeared in behalf of Eugene P. Childs (Democrat), of Annapolis. Judge Green also was a Democrat.

It is generally understood, however, that the Governor plans to name a Republican, and that Linwood L. Clark, former Representative in Congress from the Second District, is slated for the appointment. Mr. Clark is a former resident of Baltimore County, but has lived at East Port, near Annapolis, for the last several years, and was the Republican candidate defeated by Judge Green in the last November election.

Brise Predicts Nice Will Sign Bridge Bill

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chestertown, Md., April 26.—In an address before the Chestertown Rotary Club, Senator Arthur H. Brice, of Kent County, declared Gov. Harry W. Nice has no good reason for refusing to sign his Chesapeake Bay bridge bill and predicted that the Governor will sign the bill "when the time is ripe."

He said the State is confused as to the bill's provisions. Funds are to come from the Federal Government, he said.

Power Report Reflects West Virginia Upturn

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 26.—That manufacturing plants and mines in Harrison, Upshur and Lewis counties are busier than a year ago is indicated by a 6 per cent increase in use of electricity in March over the corresponding month last year, as shown by figures made public by H. S. Brubaker, Clarksburg, commercial manager of the Monongahela-West Penn Public Service, which serves the three counties.

Use of power in plants increased 3.6 per cent; in mines, 4.5 per cent, and domestic, 6 per cent.

Child Slightly Hurt In 40-Foot Plunge

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, Va., April 26.—Because soapsuds were dumped out of the back window of his home, 18 months' old Preston Houston has a good chance to grow up and tell his children how he fell three stories yesterday, landing on his head without serious injury. He toppled through the railing of a porch and dropped 40 feet.

The top of his head struck the soggy ground with such force as to leavea depression three inches deep. He was found unconscious, but at a hospital his only injury was stated to be a small cut on the lip.

Still Operator Tells of Paying Protection Fee

Witness Who Has Been Making Liquor Since '28 Heard in Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., April 26.—A man who said he made "redoubled and twisted whisky, the best there is," furnished today's climax in the Government's evidence in the Franklin County liquor conspiracy case, in which 23 individuals have been indicted, as he told of paying "granny fees" for county and State protection of his stills hidden in mountain hollows.

Testifying nearly all afternoon in Federal court, before Judge John Paul wound up the first week by recessing until Monday, William Webb said he had been making liquor in Franklin County since 1928, and that he had "made two little runs" since the grand jury investigation of the case. He asserted that until the grand jury probe started his usual protection fee amounted to $20 a month when his stills were running.

In cross-examination attacking the credibility of the witness, Defense Counsel S. D. Timberlake, of Staunton, suddenly asked Webb if he killed Jeff Richards, former deputy sheriff, to whom Webb said he paid his "granny fees," and who was killed in an ambush shooting 17 days before the grand jury met at Harrisonburg to start its investigation of the alleged moonshine ring in Franklin.

Webb vigorously denied the killing, and reasserted his denial before Judge Paul ordered the questioning along this line to be stopped as irrelevant. Later the Government established that Webb and Richards were first cousins.

Webb said when his stills were running he paid to Richards $20 a month, and that Richards told him half of it went to Edgar A. Beckett, State prohibition inspector while the State was dry. These officers, he said, never bothered any of his stills, except "when they were pushed," and then, he said, they would let him know they were coming. He said that on occasions he paid additional "granny fees" of $5 to Charlie Greer, another deputy sheriff, who "cut" his stills when he didn't pay.

During the testimony of C. T. Cooper, a definition of "granny fees" was brought out. Cooper said he thought the expression developed during the prohibition era and re-referred to money paid to assure the owner of a still and his still that "they will get along all right."

Johnson followed Lee Guilliams, Owen Wimmer and Alvin Wimmer, all of whom testified they had had engaged in the illicit liquor traffic in Franklin.

It was during Webb's cross-examination that he described expression "redoubled and twisted" liquor. He testified he and an associate had been caught with a load of liquor and that he had gone to Commonwealth's Attorney Lee to buy back his automobile. He said the liquor found in the car was "redoubled and twisted—the best there is . . ." By "redoubling and twisting," he said, he had used an old-fashioned method of distilling the liquor.

1934 Business Failures Hit Lowest Point Since 1920.

Retail Sales Climb 17 Per Cent Over '33

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 26.—Marked improvement in business conditions in the Fifth Federal Reserve District in 1934 as compared with 1933 was revealed today in the report of William W. Hoxton, chairman of the district board.

Total resources of the Richmond Reserve Bank increased $46,000,000 to aggregate $357,901,925. The gain was due mainly to an increase in Government securities held by the institution, which totaled $103,562,500 as against $78,562,500 the previous year.

Income from these securities amounted to 92 per cent of earnings as compared with 62 per cent in 1933. A profit of $14,297 for 1934 was added to the surplus.

A 20 per cent jump in debits to individual accounts in 23 cities was attributed to freezing of funds in banks that failed to open after the banking holiday and to higher prices in 1934.

Commercial failures declined 46 per cent and aggregate liabilities 63 per cent, the former reaching the lowest point since 1920 and the latter the lowest since 1919.

Retail trade jumped 17.3 per cent and wholesale business in five lines 16.8 per cent, it was reported. Agriculture was said to have enjoyed the best year for some time. Tobacco manufacture was at a higher level, but cotton consumption slumped 16 per cent and private construction remained at a low stage.

The Richmond Bank had 403 members on December 31, 1934, the report showed, with 26 new members added and 38 lost.

Jane Cowl to Go to London to Attend Opening of Her New Play, "Hervey House"

Wrote Play for King's Jubilee London Season

By Nelson B. Bell.

When "Rain From Heaven," the Theater Guild's admirable production of S. N. Behrman's provocative play, current at the National Theater, closes at the end of its engagement in Pittsburgh next week—as it will, in case you hadn't heard—the cast, in a manner of speaking, will scatter to the four corners of the earth; to two of them, at least.

Jane Cowl, whose performance in the role of Lady Violet Wyngate is one of the most brilliant of the year, will embark immediately for London. Day before yesterday this column had the happy privilege of supplying her with the photograph of herself which she liked best for passport purposes.

John Halliday, whose portrayal of the exiled music critic, Hugo Willens, is quite on a parity with the excellence of Miss Cowl's skillful limning, will board ship for a leisurely trip back to his home in Hollywood, and the other members of the cast, the languorous and romantically indefatigable Lily Cahill, the homespun and transparent Jay Fassett, Jose Ruben, one of the stage's most reliable artists, and all the rest will hie themselves to Broadway, summer homes, recreational haunts and other seasonable activities.

Supper at Midnight.

All this disclosed itself during the course of the delightful after-theater supper party given in compliment to the cast of "Rain From Heaven" by Capt. and Mrs. S. A. Greenwell, in their charming home at 2319 Twentieth street Wednesday midnight. Mrs. Greenwell and Miss Cahill are sisters, the most perfect of hostesses and not at all to be mistaken for the peculiarly annoying sort of termagant Miss Cahill impersonates in the instant play in the role of Phoebe Eldridge. Miss Cahill, off the stage, is as much like Phoebe Eldridge as Mae West is like Queen Mary!

And that reminds me. The occasion of Miss Cowl's immediate dash to London is the production there next month of "Hervey House," a play of her authorship written for the King's Jubilee, which is to open in His Majesty's Theater the night after her arrival in England—assuming that the particular ocean greyhound of her choice will not throw a shoe along the way.

This play, as Miss Cowl described it to me, at first seemed to bear a close kinship to Cornelia Otis Skinner's "Mansion on the Hudson"—except, of course, that it was not written as a solo drama—but upon a little further expatiation on the part of the author it proved to bear no relationship whatever to Miss Skinner's unaplay.

It is, however, a play depicting the effects upon an English family of the events and eventuations which they encounter during the passing of the years. It has its genesis in the remote days of earlier generations and originally was planned to end with the Great War in 1914. Miss Cowl subsequently was induced to adapt it a little more completely to the spirit and period of the Jubilee by bringing the action down to the year 1934.

Will Play It Here.

One suspects that if the play proves a success in London Miss Cowl, herself, will put it on and play in it in this country next season. If so, by the very nature of the subject matter and its distinctly British flavor, she will be surrounded by a supporting cast made up largely of English players—the best English players, as goes without saying.

Mr. Halliday returns to California because his home is there. He built himself a house on a hill during the long period of his service in the celluloids and when he boards the boat for the sail through the Panama Canal he merely will be going home.

There is, nevertheless, a slight catch in it. Mr. Halliday is wanted for the role of the uncle in Paramount's production of "Peter Ibbetson," starring Gary Cooper. When John Barrymore played the piece on the stage with Constance Collier, his elder brother, Lionel, appeared in the part for which Mr. Halliday is sought. But the picture is scheduled to go into work on May 20 and Mr. Halliday's skiff will not warp in to its dock until four days later. If Paramount can see its way clear to wait until May 24, Mr. Halliday will be with Mr. Cooper in "Peter Ibbetson;" if Paramount can not, Mr. Halliday will not be with Mr. Cooper in "Peter Ibbetson"—which might be just as well for Mr. Cooper, because Mr. Halliday is infinitely the better actor.

That Old Jimmie Pipe.

Jay Fassett is precisely the same sort of companionable individual off as he is on. Even at midnight parties he refuses to smoke cigarets, clinging tenaciously to a charred and thickly heeled pipe which he likes better. That will give you just a fragmentary idea of the genuineness and comfortable camaraderie of the man.

Jose Ruben, the Nikolai Jurin of "Rain From Heaven," has only recently undergone a serious eye operation and is appearing eight times a week behind the glaring footlights with something less than complete physical comfort—a circumstance which in no way impairs the superlative quality of his work.

Miss Cahill's recent roles have been such as to convey a totally erroneous idea of the real nature of this charming actress. In both "Alien Corn," in which she appeared with Katharine Cornell, and in "Rain From Heaven," she has demonstrated her great gifts as an interpreter of character by making real, vivid and convincing feminine figures that represent a great deal less than the ideal combination of virtues that command masculine admiration. Away from the footlights and out of the grease paint, Miss Cahill is a vivacious, unaffected, witty and fascinating young woman. So don't let Phoebe Eldridge fool you!

Miss Starr Remembers.

Then there was Frances Starr, in private life Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson, of Washington, a guest with whom we found it possible to reminisce warmly—and possibly with just a touch of nostalgia—concerning that memorable night when she opened at the Belasco Theater here in her first starring vehicle under the management of David Belasco, "The Rose of the Rancho."

It happened that a minor role of a Mexican-Gringo halfbreed in "The Rose" was played by a former associate of mine in that remote West Indian incarnation that seems centuries ago—and almost was. So I watched Miss Starr's first stellar performance from backstage. Charles Richman was leading man, Hamilton Revelle the "heavy" and the play was stage-directed by Oscar Eagle. My point of vantage was in the wings in "two." When it came to the sunlit plaza scene, Belasco used enough spotlights offstage to create the illusion of semi-tropical sunshine, which is very sunshiny, indeed. Banked in by these blazing furnaces, your reporter received a toasting from which his neck and ears peeled precisely as if he had spent a day or two under a real Southern California sun.

And Besides That—

We didn't stop there, though. Miss Starr and I. We came down through the seasons to "The Easiest Way," in which she was supported by the late Joseph Kilgour; "Marie Odile," "The Case of Becky" and a long list of other successes that have punctuated the career of this sensitive artiste, who, on Sunday night, will introduce Daniel Frohman to the audience attending the actors' fund benefit at the National that will signalize the opening of the eleventh consecutive season of the National Theater Players. All very enjoyable and old-timey, this going through the mental scrapbook.

So what happens when kindred spirits of the theater assemble under auspices that are as congenial as they are perfect?

Audrey Sieber, the sartorially effulgent and thoroughly personable young mistress of ceremonies at the Earle Theater, yesterday celebrated her twenty-first birthday and the completion of 81 weeks in her present post.

The day was marked by various exciting events. Audrey herself tossed a modest party in the Earle Restaurant with Gracie Barrie, who last night completed a three-week engagement as Earle stage headliner, and her mother as honor guests.

And Miss Sieber did not fare so badly, either. From her mother she received a specially designed and made jeweled wrist watch and from Production Manager Guy Wonders the most surprising gift of all—a week's vacation, beginning today. This was made possible by Johnny Perkins' anxiety to master the ceremonies this week at the Earle—a function he usually performs wherever and whenever he appears on a public rostrum. During last night's overture, Herb Cook and His Three Little Words interrupted their harmonizing to present the beaming Miss Sieber with a birthday card conveying in rhyme their wishes for the ensuing years. A pretty swell time was had by all. Audrey plans to fly to New York to make the most of that wonder week from Wonders.

This department's congratulations and best wishes should, of course, be added to the sum total of her felicitations.

Cummins Comes Back.

In fulfillment of an aim that would have been carried out by the late John J. Noon, the Little Theater, on Ninth street, once more will switch on its lights and present unusual films of both foreign and domestic origin.

The tiny Ninth street house, in which a bit of local cinema history has been made, has been leased by Sam Cummins, one of its former occupants, and probably the most successful that ever operated the Little.

After complete renovation and refurbishment, the Little Theater will reopen on May 1, with "War Is a Racket" as its initial offering, a new production of Mr. Cummins,' who produced "Forgotten Men" and other screen attractions that caught popular fancy—and a good many quarters at the ticket wicket.

Other features announced for future dates include "Forgotten Men," "Children of Loneliness," "Men of Courage," "Birth" and "March to the Sun." Further details later.

The tryouts for parts in "After Dark," first of their season's offerings, and permanent places in the acting groups being assembled by the Roadside Theater, held last night and Wednesday night in the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, attracted approximately twice as many applicants as last year's. Instead of a paucity of talent, the Roadsiders find themselves the victims of an embarrassment of riches. Their season last year in the old shoe heel factory, far out on the Rockville Pike was phenomenally successful. From every early indication, this summer will surpass last in productiveness and general excellence. A more accessible location will aid in bolstering attendance—in which case the Roadsiders will find themselves on the spot, so to speak, because they had trouble enough handling the crowds last year.

Bows and Genuflections.

Our attention is called to an inadvertent blunder appearing in this space yesterday to the effect that top price for the Actors Fund Benefit at the National Sunday night would be the National Theater Players' usual "$1, plus the ten per cent Government amusement tax."

The occasion being a benefit, there is no Government amusement tax. The top price, therefore, becomes a plain, unpadded, added to or inflated one buck.

Not only does the U. S. Government cooperate with Daniel Frohman, dean of the American theater and president of the Actors Fund of America, Inc., who fosters the Sunday night special performance in association with Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran of both the National and the National Theater Players, but stage hands, musicians, house staff and everyone concerned in the presentation of the gala bill will contribute his or her services to one of the worthiest charities in the United States, in or out of what we glibly term "show business."

So now you know.

The satirical newsreel made by Arthur De Titta, Washington manager of Fox Movietone News, produced for the edification of those in attendance at the White House correspondents' banquet tomorrow night, was given a private preview to an invited audience in Loew's Fox Theater last night at 11:30. It is a source of regret that this was written considerably later than that!

Through-These-Portals Note.

So F. E. Crosman, veteran stentor for the Earl of Carroll, stops by the desk on his way to a train to say that the "Vanities" will be coming along in a fortnight.

"Vanities, Vanities, all is Vanities," Carrolls Mr. Crosman, who, as a matter of fact, isn't one, at all!

Grace Capital Screens Today

The Week's Wash

New York, April 26.

Jimmy Walker, I understand, will return in August, and unless all signs and portents are wrong, he will come back to an enthusiastic metropolis. For months after his departure to Europe, mention of Jimmy Walker in a column such as this evoked howls and hoots of outraged taxpayers. Gradually that feeling of resentment gave way to a mellower and more tolerant attitude on the part of the entire city, and at this moment I'd say Jimmy Walker rated very high in the community. He can have his choice of jobs when he returns. There is one restaurant man who is willing to back him in a high class spot, with a flat salary and percentage of the gross. There will be scads of moving picture offers. I think our Jimmy will do all right, and I don't think any one will begrudge him it, because the penance was long and exile is always harsh.

Kay Francis tells me that her "Street of Chance" gave her the greatest degree of nervous tension. It was her first starring vehicle, and Hollywood was sharply divided on her ability to carry a story, inasmuch as she previously had confined her emoting to "heavies." I asked her what she considered the finest picture she'd ever made, and her reply was: "One-Way Passage." Her greatest money-maker was "The House on 56th Street." But what I started out to report was that Kay, a great friend of Countess Dorothy di Frasso, arrived in New York the day before the decision was rendered in the Geraldine Ott case. Miss Ott sued the estate of Countess Frasso's father, claiming to be his common-law wife. The countess and her coast friends, throughout the proceedings, always referred to Miss Ott as "Miss Otis," borrowing the alias from Cole Porter's song "Miss Otis Regrets." So when the decision against Miss Ott was announced two days ago, Kay Francis shot this wire to Countess Frasso: "'Miss Otis Regrets' she can not be wed today."

Sitting with Joe Schenck, Anatole Friedland, Harry Richman and Ed Reilly, the former Hauptmann counsel, at the opening of Connie's Inn Tuesday night, each one of us, in turn, commented upon the fine appearance of Jack Dempsey. The former heavyweight champion, his size exaggerated by the raised floor on which he was dancing with his wife, looked every inch the athlete in his snug, tailored dinner jacket. "There is a credit to boxing," said Schenck admiringly. "And a great guy," said Richman. It is too bad that every former champion can not wind up as brilliantly as Dempsey. It is always more pitiful to see a former big shot reduced to coffee and cakes after he had sampled the nectar which is served to those in high places. It would have been a paramount tragedy had Dempsey, always spectacular and commanding in the ring, reached the end of the trail a physical and financial bankrupt. It is nicer to see him successful in business and happy in love, because no grander guy ever came down the twentieth century trail.

It is a hot and lusty colored show that Connie Immerman has transplanted from Harlem to the former Palais Royale. The dancers stomp with furious energy, there is a double-jointed fellow who outwiggles Snakehips Tucker, the chorus is attractive to look at, and there is a little fellow who comes out in a tall shako who is a juvenile rival of the tiny Nicholas lad. Immerman, one of the oldest of the night club operators, will make himself a lot of money in his new Chez Sepia, and I recommend a visit to it.

Behind-the-Scenes: Two years ago, Virginia Cherrill was supposed to have married William Rhinelander Stewart. The ceremony was to have been performed on Vincent Astor's yacht off Tahiti. Something happened and the wedding never took place. Miss Cherrill married Cary Grant. Yesterday I saw her with Will Stewart, and she has canceled her sailing to see him again. Romance?

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

Boston, April 26.

AS this is written, two hours before they take the mat here tonight, I was strongly tempted to swing on a 3-0 ball and improve my batting average as a prophet by predicting that Ed Strangler Lewis would lose tonight's bout with Dan O'Mahoney, but I am in no mood for poking fun at wrestling right now.

POVICH.

I sat at luncheon for an hour today with a grand old guy of the racket and heard the Strangler pour out a tale of his wrestling miseries that made you gulp over your coffee as you alternately marveled at the courage of the man and shuddered at the horror of it all.

Three years ago they told him he was through—blind. His fourth attack of trachoma, the dreaded eye disease that is the scourge of the mat, had left him sightless. In his little world of darkness he could distinguish day from night only. Moving figures were lost upon his vision. America's foremost eye surgeons gave up his case as hopeless. The inroads of the germ that festered the eyelids were too great, they said.

The Strangler betook himself to Europe, there to visit an eminent German surgeon, who represented his final hope for the recovery of his sight. It was the same story, but no patient ever learned his horrible fate in the same manner in which it was conveyed to the Strangler.

BUT it is the Strangler's story, and I will let him tell it to you as he told it to me, over the coffee cups, as if it were a passing incident, and showing no more emotion than he displayed in crunching a butter roll between the massive jaws of his massive head:

"He was a long-whiskered, dignified old fellow I knew from the pictures I had seen before my sight went completely bad. If anybody could cure me, it was he, the American doctors had said. So I caught the next boat for Berlin. I could not stand that awful blindness.

"He laid me on his operating table to examine my eyes. For an hour, it seemed, he gazed under the lids, inspected the cornea and the retina. I could feel his breath on my face and his whiskers brushed by my chin as he worked. I was wondering what he was thinking; what the tests would prove, when suddenly an awful realization overtook me.

"Across my cheeks the old fellow's whiskers were brushing back and forth. My God, he was shaking his head as if saying to himself that there was 'nothing doing.' I knew it before he finally told me. The waving of his whiskers was unmistakable. What was a guy going to do? What a spot. Honest, I had spent between $150,000 and $200,000 trying to fix my eyes up.

"IT was enough to make me quit. I took the next boat back to America. It was only 41 then. I was too young to go out, but I didn't want to live as a blind man. The second day out I found my way to the rail of that boat. What was the use, I thought. I could hear the water swishing below and I knew why people did that sort of thing, but I couldn't bring myself to it. But I was back at that railing a half dozen times before that boat trip was over. Honest, I wanted to end it all. And then I began to realize that the water was cold down there. No kidding, that's what I thought about. If we had been in the tropics I'd have done it, no kidding.

"But, lucky for me, I didn't have the courage. I wanta tell you it does take courage. All this bosh about only cowards committing suicide is the bunk. Really, it takes nerve. I thought I had it, but I haven't."

Rest and home remedies accomplished for the Strangler's eyes what medical science was unable to do, he said. A long sojourn in his log cabin in the North woods and the application of homely cures restored his sight. He reads now without glasses and can wield a pump gun with the best huntsmen in the land.

Here's Easy Way to Fame: Donate Pitchers to Dodgers!

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

EBBETS FIELD, Brooklyn, April 26.—Down talking to Impresario Casey Stengel of the resident baseball club here this afternoon, and Casey would like a couple of pitchers to go with Mungo and Babich and Clark. He would like a couple of expensive pitchers and then I think he would consider winning a pennant for Brooklyn.

I do not think that the Brooklyn club will buy a couple of expensive pitchers for him, because expensive pitchers cost a lot of cash money, if you know what I mean; that is to say, that is why they are called expensive. But it seems to me a great opportunity for some philanthropic and up-to-date business man and I am suggesting that some such parties heed this article, and dig down and endow Brooklyn with a couple of these same expensive pitchers.

It wouldn't cost more than $50,000 or a $100,000, about what it costs to endow a library, or a course in a college, or a new pipe organ. Books and college courses are all right for bookish people, but two good pitchers added to this already exciting ball club would be something sensational.

Nor need it be philanthrophy entirely. The charity could be performed in the American style. A small sign could be placed alongside the pitcher's box—"Joe Doaks. Donated to the Brooklyn Baseball Club by the Z and C Twine Co., 9837 DeKalb avenue—Don't let others string you. Z and C twine is the best."

Thousands of dollars are spent on radio advertising. It seems to me the same benefit would accrue from the announcement every four days or so throughout the season—"Bill Whosis now pitching for Brooklyn through the courtesy of the little Giant Tweezer Corporation, whose slogan is—If it's a pinch, call on us."

I don't know why this has not been thought of before. Guys give animals to the zoo, pictures to art galleries, trees to the park and fish to the aquarium. If I were a Brooklyn business man, I think I would rather give a left-hander with a good curve to Mr. Stengel. I would be more certain of immortality. Animals get moth eaten, pictures go out of style, fish merely blow bubbles, but if a pennant were to come to Impresario Stengel this year, it would ring down through the ages.

Rookie Stops A's, Yanks Win, 11 to 2

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 26.—Vito Tamulis, 23-year-old rookie southpaw, took the hill for the Yankees today because a cold kept Lefty Gomez from taking his regular turn. The youngster hurled a neat 8-hit game while the Yanks blasted out an 11-to-2 victory over the Athletics.

A home run by Frank Crosetti with the bases full in the second inning brought the downfall of Joe Cascarella, who whiffed seven in as many innings. The Yanks belted three successors, Charley Lieber, Roy Mahaffey and George Caster, for six tallies in the eighth.

5 Runs in 7th Send Grove From Hill

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

FENWAY PARK, Boston, April 26.—As ten Washington runs poured through a crumbling Red Sox defense today, the raucous boos and hoots of 14,000 outraged Boston fans descended upon the ears of Joe Cronin. Fenway Park was transformed into a bedlam of indignation as the prolonged salvos directed toward Cronin increased in intensity.

The $250,000 player-manager of the Red Sox, who last fall was given a five-year contract as pilot of the Boston team, inspired the proverbially fickle fans to their jeers by making three of the five errors of which the Nats took advantage to beat the Red Sox, 10 to 5.

Six Washington runs were as unearned as the Prince of Wales' station in life. The errant fingers of Cronin, who muffed two ground balls and dropped a throw from Lefty Grove beckoned the Nats toward victory in three different innings and the fans' resentment reached its peak in the seventh.

Grove Applauded, Cronin Derided.

The Nats were in the midst of a five-run rally, inspired by an error by Doc Farrell at second base and aided by a Cronin muff a moment later, when the $250,000 ball player ordered Lefty Grove from the box.

From the bleachers were wafted the first of the boos growing in crescendo as the 14,000 in the grandstand took up the chant and directed their derision at Cronin. As Grove shuffled off the scene, the 14,000 halted their booing and stood in applause for the former star pitcher who had been betrayed by his mates' errors.

But when Grove disappeared into the dugout, the fans redirected their yelps at Cronin, who went back to his short field position with the bitter resentment of the crowd still ringing in his ears. A faithful few attempted to sway the gathering by faint applause, but it was hardly distinguishable.

Triple Answers Hoots.

First at bat in the eighth inning, Cronin again was greeted with another derisive outburst, only to meet the challenge with a scorching triple to the right field off Earl Whitehill. It was the signal for prolonged clapping by the more charitable fans in the stands, but on the fringe of the applause there was a lingering chorus of jeers.

The game over and the Red Sox beaten by the team who sold him to Boston, Cronin left the field with his mates amid mixed boos and applause, but the boos had it.

It was a sweet victory for Bucky Harris, who had been displaced from his Boston job by the coming of Cronin. Nursing a genuine hate for all that is Boston in the American League and for General Manager Eddie Collins of the Red Sox, who effected his release, Harris saw the Nats trample Cronin's club for the first time this season and heap upon it a full measure of revenge.

Whitehill Goes Route.

The Nats staked Earl Whitehill to a four-run lead in the first inning with the help of errors by Cronin and Werber and the veteran southpaw became the second Washington hurler to go the route this season, when the Nats enabled him to coast to victory by their five-run uprising in the seventh.

Cronin began the proceedings for the Nats in the first inning, when he fizzled a ground ball hit directly

Babe Didrikson Gains Golf Finals

Famous Star Wins, 1 Up; Plays 1934 Champion.

By the United Press.

Houston, Tex., April 26.—Babe Didrikson, who acknowledges no woman peer in the Olympic field trials or on the basket ball court, tonight was one step removed from her newest ambition, the winning of a woman's golf championship.

The Babe—christened Mildred—advanced to the finals of the nineteenth annual Texas Golf Association Tournament today in spectacular fashion. She dropped a 10-foot putt on the eighteenth and last hole of her match with Mrs. R. E. Winger, of Fort Worth, to win, 1 up, in a driving rain.

Tomorrow, Miss Didrikson will meet Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, the defending champion, in a 36-hole final match.

Owens Leaps To New U.S. Record

Ohio State Ace Sets Mark of 26 Feet, 1¾ Inches.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Iowa, April 26.—Jesse Owens, Ohio State's human kangaroo, drove his brown body through space today to miss breaking the world's broad jump record by just three-eighths of an inch.

This 21-year-old Cleveland lad achieved his amazing leap on his very first jump opening the preliminaries of the twenty-sixth annual Drake relay carnival. Almost before the crowd of 8,000 knew what had happened, Owens had driven his powerful legs down the cinder path with terrific speed. He bounded off the take-off board and went sailing through the air to establish a new American record of 26 feet 1¾ inches.

No other American had ever jumped this far before in competition. Only one other individual in the world, Chuhei Nambu, a Japanese, has bettered it. Four years ago Nambu leaped 26 feet 2⅛ inches in Japan to establish the present world mark, which Owens' admirers say will be broken by the Negro youth before the 1935 outdoor season is over.

Makes Track History.

By his victory Owens wrote his name at the top of the list of famous jumpers, going ahead of such stars as Dehart Hubbard, of Michigan; Edward Cordon, Iowa's Olympic champion of 1932, and Edward Hamm, of Georgia Tech, who until today held the American record of 25 feet 11⅛ inches.

Entitled to five attempts, Owens, the latest star of a long string of Ohio State track stars, used only three jumps, reserving some of his amazing ability to compete in the preliminaries of the 100-yard dash and to enable the Buckeyes to qualify in the 880-yard relay.

Owens' performance was outstanding in the preliminaries of the Drake relays which attracted a colorful field of 3,000 athletes from as far east as the Alleghenies and the Pacific Coast in the West. Owens easily qualified for the finals of the 100-yard dash tomorrow, winning his trial heat by 3 feet in 10.1 seconds.

Three Other Records.

Three other Drake relay records went tumbling after the athletes finished their first assault on the two-day attack. Mark Panther, of Iowa, Western Conference champion, smashed the record for the javelin throw, tossing the spear 210.74 feet to break the record of 209.21 established by Blair, of Louisiana State in 1934.

The University of Iowa sprint quartet, which bettered two world marks at the Kansas relays last week, lowered the Drake record to 1:26 in the 880-yard relay.

Iowa State Teachers College of Cedar Falls, Iowa, smashed the Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Association half-mile relay mark by hanging up a record of 1:29.9.

Indians Swamp Tigers With Ease, 11-3

CLEVELAND, April 26.—The Cleveland Indians won an easy victory over the Detroit Tigers here today, 11 to 3. Two successive home runs in the third inning, one by Hale with two men on bases and one by Campbell, accounted for four of the Indians' runs.

Willis Hudlin, Cleveland pitcher, gained his second victory of the season over the Tigers. Goose Goslin hit a home run for Detroit, also in the third inning.

Hall and Allison Play Final Today

Former Gains in Mason-Dixon After 5 Sets.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 26.—Rallying after a poor start, Gil Hall, of Orange, N. J., today specialized in corner shots and dazzling service to eliminate Marcel Rainville, Canadian star, in the semifinals of the annual Mason and Dixon Tennis Tourney, 6—8, 7—5, 3—6, 6—2, 6—2.

Harris to Shift Nats' Line-up When Opposing Left-Handers

By a Staff Correspondent.

BOSTON, Mass., April 26.—The Washington ball club henceforth will operate along new lines when facing left-handed pitching, Manager Bucky Harris announced today.

Viewing with alarm the effectiveness of southpaw pitchers against the six left-handed hitters in the Nats batting order, particularly the two-hit performance of young Vernon Wilshere against his club in Philadelphia, Harris today moved to remedy the situation.

With Lefty Grove on the mound for the Red Sox, Harris withdrew two of his regulars and replaced them with right-handed hitting utility men. The veteran Ossie Bluege went to third base instead of Cecil Travis and Red Kress was sent to right field in place of Stone.

"I am not disappointed in either Stone or Travis," said Harris, "but our club is top-heavy with left-handed hitters when we face southpaw pitching. We figure to meet a left-hander only every third or fourth day, however, and Stone and Travis will be in the line-up regularly against right-handed pitching."

Kress justified Harris' hopes today when he hit the ball solidly on three trips to the plate. He doubled in the seventh inning, drove in two runs at a time when the Nats were nursing a one-run lead. Thus the redhead who made an unsuccessful bid for Lyn Lary's shortstop job becomes the Nats' first alternate outfielder in preference to big Fred Sington.

Bluege hit the ball hard all day although he was credited with no hits. His play in the field at his old position, however, was flawlessly sensational.

Johnny Welch, who dealt the Nats a four-hit shut-out in Washington last week, will be on the mound for the Red Sox tomorrow.

Ed Linke, the forgotten man of the Washington pitching staff who has been overlooked while Manager Bucky Harris has been parceling out starting assignments, will get his chance tomorrow.

Franklin and four other sophomores have "crashed" the varsity and will help try to upset the favored Princeton boat, winner a year ago, in the triangular test.

Collegiate Golf Play Reaches Semifinals

Yates, Haas, Leslie and Pijanowski Survive in Athens Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Ga., April 26.—Surviving two strenuous rounds of match play, four golfers, representing Georgia Tech, Louisiana State and North Carolina, advanced today to the semifinals of the first annual Southern Intercollegiate Open tournament.

L. S. U. landed two places in the last four with Fred Haas, jr., and Paul Leslie, while Charlie Yates carries Tech's colors and Walter Pijanowski those of U. N. C.

Yates, National Intercollegiate champion, eliminated Dick Harris, North Carolina, 7-6, in the opening round and then triumphed over Dave Ewell, Richmond, 3 and 2. Ewell conquered his first opponent, Wade Hoyt, Georgia, 2-up.

After blasting his way to a 3-and-2 victory over Clifford Perry, Duke's No. 1 contestant, Haas gave a sterling exhibition in his afternoon match with Bob Riegel, of Richmond, carding a brilliant 67, six under standard figures, to trounce his Virginia opponent, 5 and 4.

Hopeful, Little Sails to Play In Britain

Concedes Self Chance to Retain Amateur Title Next Month.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—William Lawson Little, jr., broad-shouldered Californian and first American to win the British amateur golf championship on his first try, sailed for England tonight as the first American ever to defend it.

Little's baggage aboard the steamship Aquitania included a bagful of trusted and useful clubs and a small trunk packed with a lot of woolen underwear, which experience taught him last year will come in handy when he starts his title defense on May 20 at the Royal Lytham and St. Anne's course.

The ornate championship trophy he brought back with him last June already is in England. He took care of that detail two weeks ago, carefully crating it in a heavy board box and shipping it to the British Golf Union for what he termed "safe keeping, temporarily only."

Had Little Hope.

A year ago, when Little sailed as a member of the American Walker Cup squad, he harbored virtually no hope of winning the British crown. Although he has never seen the course on which the 1935 championship will be played and will encounter a grim and determined challenge from the home contingent, he embarked on his task with a "heart full of hope."

"Last year," smiled little, "I was the first American to win the title on his first try. Now I return as the first American ever to defend it. The issue is squarely up to me and I am prepared to meet the test."

Reminded that this is the golden anniversary of the championship and in all those 50 years only two

Peters Rides Gelding to Victory

Breaks Fifth, Overtakes Chief Foe in Stretch, Despite Looks.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 26.—They pay off on speed and not looks at these race tracks, and that's why a $11.10 mutual was displayed after Red John bounced down the stretch to finish ahead of a field of 11 here this afternoon. The son of Reigh Count is a dirty color that the breeders association compliments by calling gray. He looks as though he might have been a white horse that has been sleeping in a coal pile. Add to that description the fact that he did not appear to be well fed, and he wore a pair of white, bulging blinkers that made him eligible for an animated cartoon, and you have some idea of Red John.

But when it comes to picking up and laying down four hoofs, that's a stable with a different paint job. Red John might have looked like an ash-wagon horse trying to find a place to lie down, as the horses paraded to the post, but he was old Mr. Speed himself in the final rush for the wire.

Jockey "Moose" Peters is no Clark Gable himself, but he looked like a million dollars worth of riding machinery aboard the ugly horseling. The youngster, who led all the Nation's riders last year, threw all of his body into the work of teaming with Red John.

Second in the big field came Kate, the pride of the Howe Stable. She tried to say, "Here's how," but it was Red John which yelled, "When" as he went by in the closing dash. Third, Cohort Miss, a field horse. She came through on the rail with a game, but futile bid.

Red John was an inconspicuous fifth as the field went away on the mile and 70 yards trip, with Speedmore and Miss Monoa battling for the lead. Both dropped off the front of the group on the back stretch when Kate moved into the pace-setting position. It was a case of catch Kate from that point to the wire, and Red John had what it took.

The Reigh Count horse made his move at the head of the stretch and gained the momentum that was to carry him over the line with a length to spare over Kate. The mare, in turn, headed Cohort Miss by a half length.

Red John, Kate and Speedmore drew the bulk of the betting and were virtually equal choices. The time of 1:43 2-5 was ordinary.

Apprentice Jockey Jimmy Lynch tied Sonny Workman for the $500 watch offered by the track for the greatest number of winners, and has only to score one victory tomorrow to clinch the prize. Although each has 11 wins, Workman has been ordered to New York to ride for his contract employer, C. V. Whitney, and will not have a chance here. Lynch has five mounts tomorrow.

Workman, who rode sensationally in California last winter, is at his best now, and was forced to give Lynch the 5-pound apprentice allowance throughout the meeting. Lynch rode two winners today to even the score and lost a third decision by a nose. Workman was beaten a length and a half length in his two closest tries.

If Lynch is blanked tomorrow, the rivals will be awarded $250 each.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SKY HAVEN, $6.40, $2.70, $2.60; SCOTCH QUEEN, $2.50, $2.30; TWENTY KARAT, $5.20.

SKY HAVEN, slow to settle in his stride but favored by the pace of the leaders, worked his way up stoutly on the outside in the last three furlongs, came strongly after displacing the pacemakers and drew out into a commanding lead. SCOTCH QUEEN had a lot taken out of her chasing TWENTY KARAT and she weakened fast after reaching the home stretch. TWENTY KARAT had nice speed while setting the pace, saved ground, but failed to rally after her early efforts. INSCRIPTION went strongly from the beginning and showed a good effort. BARCELONA PETE lost considerable ground while bettering his position. BARBIZON raced well for the entire trip. EDYTH M. stopped.

SECOND RACE—Four and a half furlongs. Purse, $800. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:10. Winner, Mrs. L. Viau's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONQUER, $5.30, $3.90, $2.90; †MR. QUICK, $9.50, $5.60; CAPTAIN JINKS, $7.30.

CONQUER, away in the first flight and having good speed to take command, raced SON OF TROY and ZUNI into submission, opened up a winning lead when reaching the home stretch and held MR. QUICK safe. Latter went in the thick of contention, came to the outside and closed with good energy under punishment. CAPTAIN JINKS worked his way up gradually and was gaining along on the first two at the end. WISE WILL, forced to race wide for racing room, closed resolutely when in full stride. GRAND KNIGHT could not reach the leaders, but finished racing gamely. SON OF TROY weakened badly during the stretch run. DEEP RUN was unable to menace. ZUNI bolted fractiously before the start. Then broke well and showed speed for three furlongs, then stopped suddenly. The others were outrun.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate and chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:40. Off at 3:42½. Winner, D. A. Wood's ch. c. (3), by Pennant—Waterblossom. Trained by G. W. Ogle. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47, 1:11 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JIM JOHN, $4.00, $2.70, $2.30; WITAN, $3.50, $2.90; ZAY, $3.60.

JIM JOHN, restrained while following close to the leaders, took command when ready and had enough in reserve during the final drive to stall off WITAN. Latter was kept within striking distance of the leaders, improved his position on the outside until reaching the home stretch, then went to the inside and finished stoutly. ZAY had nice speed while in early contention, responded to pressure and outstayed DANCING CLOUD. Latter gained fast when put to a drive, came to the outside, but hung approaching the finish. GOOD CHEER was unable to enter contention. GOLDEN SEPTRE weakened badly after reaching the home stretch. ORIFICE displayed speed in the first three furlongs.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Griffwood. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:10. Off at 4:15. Winner, Mrs. Silas B. Mason's ch. c. (3), by Display—Cherry Court. Trained by J. T. Taylor. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:12 2-5, 1:39, 1:44 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEMONSTRATION, $16.50, $5.40, $3.30; LEGUME, $3.20, $2.30; THRUSTER, $2.90.

DEMONSTRATION, full of run and following under steadying restraint back of the leaders, moved up strongly when released from reserve, took command in the closing furlong, but had to be vigorously handled to outstay LEGUME. Latter, steadied close up in the early running, was placed to punishment in the last quarter-mile, was bumped and knocked off his stride by THRUSTER in the closing furlong, but continued gamely after recovering. THRUSTER bumped his way between BOSTON BROOK and LEGUME to gain command going to the first turn, showed good speed while setting the pace, but tired during the final drive under punishment and impeded LEGUME when swerving. BOSTON BROOK began tiring after six furlongs. CRISTATE could not better his position.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. Grade "C" Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:50. Winner, Mrs. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED JOHN, $11.10, $7.60, $5.70; KATE, $5.20, $3.30; COHORT MISS (field), $12.70.

RED JOHN, rated back of the leaders until reaching the final turn, gained stoutly to engage the leader while on the outside, assumed a short lead and came out steadily nearing the end. KATE raced into a brief lead when midway of the back stretch, met persistent contention from DOKAS, and continued stoutly under punishment in the final drive. COHORT MISS worked her way up steadily from a slow beginning, secured racing room on the inside during the stretch drive and finished strong. DOKAS was accorded room on the outside trip and held on with XANDRA was gaining steadily all during the final stages. STEELHEAD was unable to threaten at any stage. MISS MONOA tired. SA did SPEEDMORE.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward (Maryland bred). Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:20. Off at 5:24. Winner, L. G. HARD CHASE, placed forwardly in the early racing, disposed of BOSCOBEL without effort approaching the final turn, saved ground thereafter and continued stoutly to last long enough. ROLLICK, outrun for six furlongs, circled his field and came with a rush in the last three furlongs. BRIAR BLUE entered contention steadily and finished resolutely during the closing drive. ADVOCATE JUNIOR went prominently early. He swerved to the inside of the leaders after reaching the home stretch. JIM BROWN closed with good courage. COLORIST raced in spots. HAPPY EASTER had no mishaps. BOSCOBEL stopped, as did BEAU GOVANS. BEAUTIFUL MAINE and SALISBURY were away very slowly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:55. Off at 5:56½. Winner, L. H. STANDOUT, outpaced for the first six furlongs, closed fast after settling in his stride, came to the outside and was up in the last strides. GLORITONE raced close to DONA DULCIN from the beginning, responded strongly and just failed to last after getting to the front in the last sixteenth. DONA DULCIN showed keen improvement, had good speed while setting the pace, saved ground and fought it out stubbornly. FLAXEN, slow to begin, secured racing room on the inside to enter contention, then finished stoutly. LAST ROMANCE was in tight quarters all during the last half-mile after meeting with interference. COUSIN GEORGE had no excuses. LUCULENT raced in dull fashion. O'NEILL stopped.

$7,500 Stake Scheduled At Graw

Head Play to See Action as Field of 14 Seeks Philadelphia Purse.

By a Staff Correspondent.

HAVRE DE GRACE, April 26.—The $7,500 added Philadelphia Handicap, one of the historic fixtures at this race track, will mark the high point of an interesting closing day program. Fashioned for 3-year-olds and upward over the 1 1-6-mile course, the Philadelphia has drawn a field of 14. No truly great horses are entered, but the group is one of the best balanced in the history of the event and experts concede good chances to at least ten of those named on the overnight list.

The race will mark the return to Maryland competition of Head Play, the property of Mrs. Silas B. Mason. Head Play is the horse that battled Broker's Tip to a nose decision in the Kentucky Derby finish that resulted in the suspension of Jockeys Meade and Fischer. A week later, Head Play came to Maryland to win the Preakness in which Broker's Tip was last.

NRA and Sleuths Clash Today in Government League Opener

High Officials To Witness Battle

Buchholz to Toss First Ball; Station WMAL Plans Broadcast.

ITS line-up dotted with baseball talent that would do credit to any professional minor league club, a potentially powerful NRA nine faces the Bureau of Investigation at 2:30 p. m. today in the opening game of the U. S. Government League on the East Ellipse.

These rival teams stand out as decided favorites for The Post Association title, although Treasury and District Repair Shop, the other members of the loop, are reputed to be exceptionally strong.

Fred Buchholz, president of the Government league, will toss out the first ball to initiate the official season. Donald Richberg, NRA chieftain, and Homer Cummings and Edgar Hoover have promised to be on hand to cheer their teams to victory. Postmaster General Farley, Undersecretary of the Treasury "Chip" Robert and many other government officials will occupy seats in the stands, erected for the game.

Bought by Scouts.

Morris "Gook" Taylor, recently made manager of the Investigation team, will be initiated in his new role today and direct the team's play from his first-base position.

At his peak several years ago, Taylor was sought by several major league scouts because of his sensational fielding and hitting. He signed a contract with a Texas league club, but gave up a possible professional baseball career in favor of his present job with the Department of Justice.

Earl Mattingly for NRA and southpaw Ray Davidson will be the probable pitchers for this afternoon.

Pre-game ceremonies as well as a play-by-play description of the contest, will be broadcast over station WMAL. The National Training School Band will furnish the music.

Navy Host Today To Cornell Crews

Both Squads Confident; Four Races Slated.

Annapolis, Md., April 26.—Favored by fine conditions of water and bright sunshine, rival oarsmen of Cornell University and the Naval Academy engaged in final workouts this afternoon in preparation for their four-cornered regatta on Severn River tomorrow afternoon. There will be races between varsity, jayvee, freshmen and lightweight eight-oared crews.

The regatta will begin with the brush between the 150-pounders, scheduled for 3 p. m., and the other contending crews will be sent away at half-hour intervals in the following order: Freshmen, jayvees and varsity. In the event of water and weather conditions similar to today, fine tests of oarsmanship are anticipated. Tonight the rival coaches, Charles (Buck) Walsh, of Navy, and Jim Wray, of Cornell, were confident of the outcome. The Itahacans will be making their season's debut.

Other events on Navy's sports program include varsity baseball with Gettysburg, lacrosse with Syracuse and tennis with University of Virginia. The plebe baseball tossers will entertain St. Alban's School, of Washington. The middy field and track stars are at Philadelphia participating in the Penn relays.

West Virginia Routs G. U., 16 to 9

Hoyas' 11 Errors Aid Foe; Three Local Hurlers Are Pounded.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A SLUGGISH Georgetown nine yesterday finished on the short end of a 16-to-8 decision at the Hilltop, losing to West Virginia in a game that is more adequately described as a cross between a three-ring circus and high school track meet.

It was strictly a pitchers' battle—from a Georgetown viewpoint. Three Hoya hurlers were sacrificed to the hungry Mountaineers on the altar of the curve ball, and Coach Ralph McCarthy was carefully appraising the gallery for more recruits when Ed Cuffe finally settled down and came through the last four innings in respectable style.

Cuffe's offerings were culled for a half dozen hits and seven runs, but that was comparatively mild treatment after the way Ed Hargaden and "Maggie" Maguire were treated.

Score Seven Runs.

Hargaden started the third inning but Maguire finished it, and between the two of them, aided by Jerry Dolan's fancy if ineffective defensive play in left field, West Virginia scored seven runs. All told, and we may as well tell all, the Hilltoppers committed 11 errors and nearly all figured in the scoring.

But little Mel Melone, Georgetown's sample-sized center fielder, evened the count on this score with a lusty drive that bounded over the center field wall. Melone spent most of the afternoon on the merry-go-round with five hits in as many tries.

Sports Through Berube's Eyes—

Richmond U. Nine Takes 8th in Row

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 26.—Richmond University, leading the State Baseball League, made it eight victories in a row by defeating Virginia Tech, 4 to 2, this afternoon.

The two teams got only 11 hits between them, but errors were costly to each side. Morris of the Spiders struck out seven and allowed six hits, while Saunders surrendered only five safeties.

Richmond scored two in the second, and one each in the fourth and sixth. The Techmen got both their tallies in the eighth.

Brown, Spider outfielder, contributed a beautiful play when Saunders, with three Techmen on base, drove out a deep fly which Brown caught and then pegged home for a second out.

V. P. I. and V. M. I. Divide on Track

By the Associated Press.

Blacksburg, Va., April 26.—Virginia Tech and V. M. I. track teams divided laurels in their nineteenth meeting on the cinders at Miles Stadium today.

The Cadets nosed out the Tech varsity, 67 1-3 to 58 2-3, taking eight first places to six, while the Tech freshmen were winning their third straight victory handily, 69 to 44.

Capt. Locklin Bell and Ivan Mothershead, of Tech, put on "ironman" exhibitions in all races from the quarter mile up, but the Gobblers failed to withstand V. M. I.'s assault in the sprints, hurdles, weights, javelin and broad jump.

Running "under wraps," Tech's Ivan Mothershead won the mile and the quarter-mile and tied his teammate, Fred Shirk, for first in the half. He led the scorers with 14 points, followed by Gwynne Tayloe, V. M. I., with 13; Ackerly, with 11; Farley and Bailey, V. M. I., with 10 each, and Tech's Capt. Bell, with 9.

Twins Humble Lee-Jackson Nine, 22-2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., April 26.—Alexandria High School had a field day at the expense of Lee-Jackson this afternoon, on Baggett's Field, the Twins routing the Little Generals, 22 to 2. The locals capitalized on allen errors, extra-base hits and walks to score the majority of their markers.

Ed Hammersley, ace of the Twins mound staff, worked five innings and pitched shutout ball, allowing the visitors only two hits. He struck out nine batters before he was relieved by Pete Heflin, who worked two innings and granted four hits. Butch Woods pitched the final frame and gave up one safety.

Sales Halt Stock Rise; Rails Firm

Traders Are Disappointed When Treasury Fails to Advance Silver.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—Stocks churned about in an active market today with final prices showing the results of substantial profit taking.

Metal shares began the day well as world silver prices again rose to 81 cents an ounce, but realizing and disappointment when the Treasury failed to advance its buying price for the metal to accord with the international level left most of the group's leaders only fractionally higher, and a few with losses. Silver King, at 19¼, was an exception with a lift of 3¼ points.

After the silver boomlet had spent its force, leadership passed to the rails, which came ahead well in the last hour of trading. The weekly carloadings figures showed a better than seasonal pick-up and hopes of a favorable Supreme Court decision on the carrier pension law when the Supreme Court reconvenes on Monday, buoyed sentiment for this division.

Business in the stock exchange was brisk, aggregating 1,521,720 shares, although the slowing down, as irregularity developed late in the session, left the volume moderately short of the previous session. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks declined .1 of a point to 40.2, although the 15 rail stocks in the compilation were .3 of a point up at 22.2.

Wheat Rises Again to $1

Cotton Advances Under Foreign Buying; May Option at 11.85.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 26.—Sensational jumps of the silver market, together with resultant talk of inflation, led to sharply higher prices today for grains.

It was the first time in weeks that inflation chances have operated as a grain market major influence, and the effect was heightened by the fact that dollar quotations here for wheat reappeared following a sudden 4-cent bulge at Minneapolis. Indications of enlarged demand for flour was reported as partly responsible for soaring of Minneapolis wheat values.

Wheat in Chicago closed buoyant at the day's topmost point, 2⅛@2¼ above yesterday's finish, May, $1.00¼@1.00½; corn, ⅞@1⅛ up; May 89@89⅛; oats, 1@1⅛ advanced, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to 7 cents gain. Contributing to the upward impetus of wheat prices was knowledge that domestic mill and elevator stocks of wheat were officially estimated at materially below the total a year ago.

Corn and oats moved up with wheat, despite ideal weather for corn planting. Provisions were responsive to grain strength, although hog values ruled lower.

Cotton Market.

New York April 26 (AP).—Cotton advanced to new high ground for the movement today on foreign buying prompted by the advance in bar silver.

Trading was only moderately active with some profit-taking appearing on the advances. July sold up from 11.70 to 11.86 and during the middle of the afternoon prices were 7 to 10 points net higher, or within a few points of the best for the day so far.

After selling off to within 2 to 4 points of the previous close prices turned steadier. The advance in silver prompted renewed buying and July recovered from 11.70 to 11.84.

Automobile Industry Enjoys World-Wide Boom as Output Abroad Mounts to Record Level; Motor Vehicles Being Popularized in Europe Now.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 26.—While the automobile manufacturing industry in the United States has enjoyed a notable degree of recovery during the past year, an even more impressive record has been made by it in other countries. Outside the United States and Canada, in fact, automobile production in 1934 attained a new high record, and the boom in the industry continues apace this year on virtually a world-wide basis.

The output of cars and trucks in the rest of the world, outside this country and the Dominion, aggregated 803,654 units for 1934, according to the overseas edition of the American Automobile. This total compares with 665,060 units produced in 1933, and with 655,736 in the boom year 1929. In the United States and Canada, on the other hand, the production of 2,895,629 units last year was not much more than 50 per cent of the 1929 level.

The conclusion is thus indicated that in other countries a development is now going on similar to that which occurred here in the post-war decade. The automobile and truck are becoming popular vehicles of transportation, causing continuous increases in the annual volume of production of motor units to meet a steadily expanding demand.

U. S. Has 70 Per Cent of World Vehicle Total.

At the beginning of 1935, there were 24,751,644 motor vehicles registered in the United States and 10,175,477 elsewhere. The number of cars in operation is now rising rapidly in a number of foreign countries, but is not showing much change here. Hence, the conclusion is clearly indicated that the market for new car owners, aside from replacement demand, will be found chiely abroad. This is an important consideration in appraising the export possibilities for American cars in the year to come. This development will also have a great effect on economic conditions in a number of foreign countries, just as it did in this country during the post-war period.

Automobile production has shown the greatest expansion latterly in England, Germany and Russia. England produced 256,866 passenger cars and 85,633 commercial vehicles in 1934. This was a gain of more than 25 per cent over 1933, when her output was already at record levels. Germany registered even a more striking gain, its production for 1934 being 173,014 units, consisting of 147,330 passenger cars and 25,684 trucks. The gain over 1933 was over 60 per cent. Soviet Russia produced in 1934 some 72,000 vehicles, about three times as many as in 1933.

The present boom in world automobile production must be ascribed primarily to five factors. First, other peoples are becoming automobile-minded, so that cars are shifting rapidly from the status of a luxury to that of a necessity of life. This is particularly the case in the more advanced European countries, mass living standards approach our own. Improved internal economic conditions have helped to hasten the change. Secondly, especially in Russia, South America and parts of Asia, motor vehicles are being used in place of railroads as the major agency of transportation to a growing extent, especially to develop areas that have inadequate rail facilities. Thus, in Russia, 78 per cent of the road vehicles produced last year were trucks built to supplement the inadequate transportation capacity of Russian railroads.

Military Demands Stimulate Industry.

Military preparedness also has stimulated automobile production abroad. The mechanization of many branches of the military forces which previously used horse power has been a notable influence everywhere.

A fourth cause has been reform in automobile taxation. Great Britain and Germany, in particular, have reduced excessive tax rates on cars, thus facilitating their wider use. Governments are finding lower horsepower taxes on cars result in increased revenues from this source.

The fifth factor is the steady improvement in roads. In many countries unemployment relief plans take the form largely of new road construction. With the building of new roads and the improvement of old ones, popular use of automobiles and commercial vehicles is facilitated, and further stimulus is thus given to the purchase of more cars.

The keen demand for cars and trucks abroad has raised American exports of automobiles to record levels latterly, despite the rapid expansion of foreign production. However, the success of England, Germany and Japan in producing cheap cars, as well as ever rising trade barriers abroad, may threaten American supremacy in foreign markets for automobiles before long. General Motors and Ford have intrenched themselves against such a development, however, by acquiring leading production companies in England, Germany and elsewhere, so that they can compete in foreign countries on equal terms with domestic manufacturers.

Machine Tool Orders Register Sharp Rise

New York, April 26.—A sharp upturn in machine tool orders last month followed a small decline in February. Both last year and the year before demand declined straight through the first quarter and in 1934 the downtrend carried through July.

The index of the National Machine Tool Builders Association this year rose from 53.0 in February to 62.3 in March, a gain of nearly 18 per cent. First quarter domestic orders were 14 per cent larger this year than last and foreign orders were 35 per cent higher.

Consolidated Oil Plans to Refund $50,000,000 Bonds

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—The first step in a $50,000,000 refunding program was revealed today by Consolidated Oil Corporation in a letter mailed to stockholders soliciting proxies for a special meeting June 4 to authorize a new bond issue to replace current obligations.

Securities senior to the common stock outstanding in the hands of the public at December 31, last, consisted of $29,440,800 of 7 per cent series A, first lien bonds, due in 1936; $16,221,100 of 6½ series B bonds due in 1938 and $10,184,400 par value of 8 per cent cumulative preferred stock.

Plans for the new issue are still in the tentative stage. If a 4 per cent issue is floated, the annual savings in interest will total roughly $1,200,000 and the elimination of preferred dividends a further $800,000, according to the company's calculations.

Washington Clearings Up 21 Per Cent

National Average Is 6.6 Per Cent Under Same Week of 1934.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Clearings through Washington banks during the last week were 21 per cent higher than in the corresponding week of 1934, the Washington Clearing House reported yesterday. In the same period, clearings through all United States banks showed a decrease of 6.6 per cent from the corresponding 1934 figure.

The total for this city in the week ending Wednesday, April 24 was set at $15,835,762 as compared with an aggregate of $13,055,332 in the same 1934 week. For the entire country the total for the past week as reported by Dun & Bradstreet was $4,658,605,000 against $4,989,798,000 for the like week of last year.

The drop was occasioned mainly by a sharp reduction at New York City where the total was $3,023,191,000, or 12.1 per cent below a year ago. At a number of important cities outside of New York, clearings continued substantially higher than they were a year ago.

New Orleans Leads.

New Orleans, with a gain of 47 per cent scored the widest gain. Kansas City with 32.8 per cent higher clearings than a year ago was in a second place, while Detroit with a 28.4 per cent increase over 1934, placed next. Other leading cities in the Fifth Federal Reserve District showed lesser gains, Richmond reporting a 8.3 per cent increase and Baltimore, 2.2 per cent higher clearings.

As compared with the preceding week, local clearings dropped 21 per cent from the previous total of $19,557,762. In the entire country the drop during the week was $662,598,000.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—A fair degree of activity prevailed on the stock exchange today despite the end of the account. Industrials were a firm feature on good trade reports, gilt-edged securities met with support owing to cheap money, and silver shares strengthened with the prices of that metal. Transatlantic issues were quoted a shade over parity. The market closed steady.

Paris—Business was dull on the bourse today awaiting the outcome of the Franco-Soviet negotiations. Trading volume was reduced to a minimum. Belgian issues received better support, while all industrial shares were quiet. The closing was dull.

Berlin—The slight improvement in business had no effect on the bourse today which closed quietly steady.

Curb Climbs With Silver

Spirited Demand for Mining Shares; Sunshine Up 4 Points.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—Mining shares continued in strong demand on the curb market today, deriving further impetus from another boost in world silver prices. Substantial profit taking, however, appeared in the general list. Transfers approximated 328,000 shares compared with yesterday's record turnover of 352,000.

Sunshine Mining advanced nearly 4 points in heavy volume. Bunker Hill & Sullivan got up 3 points while Hecla Mining improved half as much. Lake Shore was up fractionally but Newmont slipped back 1¼. Singer Manufacturing rose 5 points on a light turnover. Moderate recessions appeared in Greyhound Corporation, American Gas & Electric, Swift & Co. and Pan-American Airways.

Binkerd Compares Diesel and Steam

Baldwin Official Recalls Former High Speeds.

New York, April 26.—Robert S. Binkerd, vice president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, spoke tonight before the regular monthly meeting of the New York Railroad Club in the United Engineering Societies Building on steam and Diesel power. The title of his speech was "Muzzle Not the Ox That Treadeth Out the Corn." Among other things Mr. Binkerd said:

"The railroad and equipment industries will owe a debt of gratitude to the developers of Diesel power and lightweight trains—not because they will supersede steam and standard equipment, but because they are stimulating constructive thought and effort.

"At the present time a false impression is being created with regard to the improvement of passenger schedules. The truth is that this new twentieth century development of Dieselized lightweight trains has not yet touched nineteenth century performances with steam, and hardly more than parallels the daily performance of many modern steam trains of today."

Retail Volume 5% Ahead of Last Year

New York, April 26.—With total retail dollar sales (excluding food) about 10 per cent above 1934 during the first half of April, it is estimated that pre-Easter business this year was slightly larger on a dollar basis than in 1934. For the year to date, a 2 per cent increase of retail store gross revenues has been registered, according to the Standard Statistics Co. of New York.

This gain reflects an even wider improvement in physical output, inasmuch as average retail prices have ranged below a year earlier by 1 per cent (early January) to 4 per cent (in early April). It is concluded, therefore, that the unit volume of merchandise moved into consumers' hands thus far in 1935 has bettered last year's corresponding figures by around 5 per cent.

Power Bonds Reach High For the Year

Industrials Suffer Setback After Good Rise.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26. — A slight setback in industrial issues marred the corporate bond market's calm today, but rails and utilities reasserted their right to leadership and more than offset the defection. U. S. Governments ended a shade lower.

The rapid clip at which low-priced industrial bonds have moved upward within the past several days, when some traders sensed inflationary implications in the step-by-step advance in silver prices, was believed in investment quarters to have attracted profit taking.

Rail and utility bonds, forced to play second fiddle within the last few days when the industrials monopolized attention, came back with vigor today and many leaders scored a gain of a point or so without difficulty.

The Associated Press averages for 10 rails advanced .2 of a point and that for 10 utilities gained .3 of a point to 92.6, a new 1935 high.

In the Government section, trading was slow and final prices 4-32ds higher to 5-32ds lower. Transfers aggregated $12,175,000, par value, compared with $13,348,000 on Thursday.

New York, April 26 (AP).—President Perry, of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., says the corporation's factories are operating at about 55 per cent of capacity and have been for the last six of eight weeks.

The chances are good that they will continue at this rate over the next month or longer, he said.

Terps Capture Sprint Title At Penn

ord of 3:38 seconds. He was colcked in 54.7.

Where Torrance achieved his shotput record on the first try, Blair was obliged to make his final effort the best in order to capture the hop, step and jump with a mark of 47 feet, 8 inches. This enabled Blair, who generally specializes in the javelin ,to beat out Eulace Peacock, Negro star of Temple University.

During an afternoon of brisk competition, four noteworthy carnival records were broken in addition to a flock of notable schoolboy performances, while the University of Maryland and Michigan State registered surprise triumphs in two of the principal relay championships.

Willis Ward, Michigan's famous Negro athlete and all around performer, scored a sensational victory over Phil Good, of Bowdoin, Eastern intercollegiate champion, in the record time of 14.5 seconds for the 110-meter high hurdles. Ward pulled away to beat Good by 3 yards, with Virginia's Grover Everett, who set the former record of 15.1 last year, third.

Discus Throw Beaten.

The carnival mark for the discus throw was breaten by Anton Kishon, of Bates, with a winning throw of 151 feet 3¾ inches, nearly 8 inches below the record set last year by Zori, of North Carolina State.

St. Benedict's Preparatory School, of Newark, N. J., accounted for a third conspicuous carnival record by outracing a field of more than 60 teams in the interscholastic medley championship, beating Manchester (Conn.) High School in the extraordinary time of 7 minutes 45.7 seconds for the aggregate distance of 7¾ miles.

West Philadelphia Catholic High School's team ran the fastest schoolboy mile in carnival history, 3:27.1, surpassing the former high-school standard of 3:27.4 established in 1921 by the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) quartet.

Maryland Victor.

Columbia's sprinters, victorious over New York University, Cornell and Pennsylvania in the final of the 440-yard college relay championship, shared the baton-passing honors with Maryland, which registered its first major relay triumph in the 41-year history of the carnival, and Michigan State, triumphant for the first time in any relay feature since 1927.

Maryland, thanks to a dazzling furlong by Earl Widmyer and a fine anchor 880 by Coleman Headley, came from behind to whip Columbia's favorites and Pittsburgh's strong quartet in the sprint medley relay. Headley broke the tape a scant stride ahead of Columbia's Bill Patterson, who made up a 20-yard deficit on the anchor leg and just managed to nose out Fred Kiger, Pittsburgh star, in the battle for second place. It was one of the day's most thrilling finishes, with Colgate fourth and North Carolina fifth.

Roger Leverton, a product of Central High School, Washington, carried the University of Richmond's colors to victory in the first heat of the 110-meter high hurdles, tying the record of 15.1 seconds hung up last year by Grover Everett, of the University of Virginia.

Everett was second to the Richmond flyer, but he reversed the tables in the first semifinal, finishing second to Ward, while Leverton was forced to accept fourth.

Randolph-Macon Bows as Burnett Takes 880.

Winning 9 of the 14 events in convincing fashion, Gallaudet's track team yesterday inaugurated the 1935 season with a 69-57 victory over Randolph-Macon at Kendall Green.

Joe Burnett's victory in the 880-yard run, which he won easily, clinched the decision after the visitors threatened to overhaul their hosts by virtue of their victory in the low hurdles. Burnett also triumphed in the mile and 2-mile tests.

Cronin Errors Booed as Nats Win, 10-5

at him, his old weakness, and Bluege was safe on first with one out. Then followed a single by Manush, a double to left by Joe Kuhel that scored two runs, Bolton's walk, shoddy playing by Cronin on Kress' ground ball, which averted a force out at second, and an error by Bill Werber on Powell's bunt. The Nats had their 4-to-0 lead.

The Sox whittled away at this margin, scoring one run at a time in the first, third and fifth innings, and it was still a ball game. But the Nats went ahead, 5 to 3, in the sixth, when Lary single, stole second and scored on Myer's single with two out.

Kress Muffs Long Fly.

It was still anybody's ball game after the sixth, when the Sox got a run back without a hit. Right Fielder Red Kress made a three-base muff of Dahlgren's long fly and Dahlgren scored when Lyn Lary relayed the ball against the stands in back of third base.

Boston fans were still envisaging a winning rally when the seventh inning blow-off occurred.

Doc Farrell started it all when he muffed Manush's grounder and then Cronin dropped Grove's perfect throw to second on Kuhel's bunt, leaving both runners safe. Kress atoned for his error of the sixth with a screaming double to center that scored Manush and Kuhel, and the Nats had four runs across in the inning and a 9-to-4 lead when Powell and Whitehill singled.

It was at this point that Cronin removed the faltering Grove and Boston fandom put on its scene. Quarter - million - dollar shortstops were being quoted at a nickle along about the seventh inning here today.

Lawson Little Off To Play in Britain

golfers—both Britons—ever have won the championship two years in a row, Little seized these statistics as a means of emphasizing his confidence.

"Well," he said, "if they did it then, at least I've got a chance."

By his own admission the holder of the British and American simonpure titles is not putting and driving as well as he was at Prestwick, where he played 23 holes in eight under par to crush Carpenter Jim Wallace in the final and become the third American to win the title. The others were Jess Sweetser in 1926 and Bob Jones in 1930. Neither returned to defend the honor.

Following the Augusta National Invitation tournament, in which he finished the low amateur, Little has practiced with the smaller British ball for the last two weeks.

"In getting accustomed to the British ball, the only difference I found was that it doesn't stop so quickly on the green as our ball does," said Little. "On the whole, I feel my game is sufficiently strong enough for me to enjoy the party, because that's what the British championship is and our championship at Brookline last year was. Win or lose, I'll have a lot of fun.

10 Are Burned As Fire Traps Crew in Sewer

Oil-Laden Water Ignites; Three Near Death and One Is Missing.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 26.—Ten PWA laborers were burned, eight of them critically, as flames shot along the oil-laden waters of a sewer in which they were working near the Grand Boulevard Viaduct industrial section today.

City Hospital attaches tonight said three of the victims had only a slight chance to recover, while rescue crews sought for one man who was unaccounted for.

After an investigation Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann said the explosion had been made possible by the dumping of 1,000 gallons of fuel oil and 500 gallons of gasoline into a sewer.

A truck driver by mistake pumped the gasoline into a tank containing the fuel oil, and then emptied the tank into the sewer at the instructions of his superiors, the mayor explained. No criminal action had been instituted tonight.

The sewer was enveloped in flame as a discarded match ignited oil that had seeped into the chamber. Two muffled explosions followed the fire and hurled manhole covers from the seats over a mile radius. Windows in the neighborhood were shattered.

Confusion broke out in the sewer as the crew of 13 laborers, trapped by the flames and smoke, tried to reach the exit. Several of them slipped from the narrow runway on which they had been working and fell into the waist-deep water which was capped with running fire.

Angelo Vella, 21, one of the workmen, said an oily substance appeared on the sewer water yesterday. "I lighted a cigarette and threw the match into the water, not thinking it might light the oil," he said. "The minute that match hit the water there was a big burst of fire."

Post Wins New Comics Verdict

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, April 26.—The appellate division of the New York State Supreme Court today affirmed the judgment of the lower court which required the Tribune Co., of Chicago, and its syndicate service to continue to furnish to The Washington Post the four comic strips known as the Gumps, Dick Tracy, Winnie Winkle and Gasoline Alley and two feature articles.

The suit to restrain The Washington Times Co. from publishing these comics and features in The Washington Herald or in any other newspaper published by it in Washington, recently was decided in favor of The Post by the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Following the refusal of the Supreme Court of the United States to review this decision an injunction was issued against The Times Co., and the comics and features now are appearing exclusively in The Post.
